Cerwinske tops Zoll in primary

Former Nashua councilman wins GOP nomination for supervisor seat by 11 votes

By BOB FENSKE
Of the Reporter

Scott Cerwinske, a former Nashua City Councilman, knocked off the longest-tenured member of the Chickasaw County Board of Supervisors during Tuesday's primary, according to unofficial results released by the County Auditor's Office.

Cerwinske received 90 votes, or 53.2 percent, in the Republican primary for the District 2 seat that covers much of the southwestern part of the county, including the city of Nashua, while three-term incumbent Tim Zoll garnered 79 votes, or 46.8 percent on a night in which the GOP had two contested county races.

The results of Tuesday's election will not be official until the Board of Supervisors canvas the election next week.

Zoll was first elected to the seat in 2010 and won re-election in 2014 and 2018, and as of now, Cerwinske does not have an opponent in the November election because no Democrats filed nomination papers during the primary.

In the other contested race Tuesday, Matthew Ysbrand run a close election for the GOP county treasurer nomination as he received 446 votes, or 50.9 percent, and his opponent, Jackie Bohr, was tabbed by 428 voters, or 48.9 percent.

A number of candidates ran unopposed for county office nominations. The Republicans who sailed through the primary included Travis Suckow (Board

'Connecting' best part of fellowship for N-P teacher

Turner says she is surprised and humbled by LMC Unsung Heroes Fellowship selection

By BOB FENSKE
Of the Reporter

Don't get Suzy Turner wrong, she is humbled and honored to be one of the 11 teachers from around the globe who have been selected for the Lowell Milken Center (LMC) Unsung Heroes Fellowship this summer.

And she will tell you she expects to learn a lot from those putting on the weeklong event at the center that is located in Fort Scott, Kansas.

Yet at the same time, what program, the program she will really has Turner excited is the fact that she knows she'll get plenty of ideas from fellow teachers.

"It's the best part of these programs, in my mind," she said. "The actual programs are interesting and educational, absolutely, but what sticks out to me when I'm involved with programs like this is meeting other teachers, finding out that this works, this didn't work, this is something we tried. There's a bond, and even years after, I know I can contact them and bounce ideas off of them."

But what makes the Unsung Heroes Fellowship so special to Turner, who has taught at Nashua-Plainfield for the past 18 years, is the fact that this is a program in which the LMC reached out to her.

Instead of applying for the program, the program she will attend later this month reaches

Supervisors vote, albeit barely, to move ahead on possible EMS vote

Board passes first reading of resolution to appoint advisory committee, gets update on proposed carbon pipeline that would run through county

By Bob Fenske
Of the Reporter

The Chickasaw County Board of Supervisors on Monday moved ahead a resolution that could lead to voters in the county deciding this November if they're willing to having ambulance service declared "essential" to the county.

But the board did so just barely as it voted 3-2 — with Jacob Hackman and Steve Breitbach both dissenting — to pass the first reading of a resolution that would set up an advisory council that would recommend to supervisors how much they should levy if voters approve what is known as 422D, a part of the state code that allows residents to declare ambulance service essential; thus allowing tax dollars to be levied to support the service.

"This does not commit anyone to anything today as far as what's going on the ballot," County Attorney David Laudner told board members. "All it does is keep the ball moving forward.... so at some point in the future it can be [potentially] on the ballot."

Laudner emphasized that no matter what the advisory council comes up with for a recommendation, supervisors "will have the final say what goes on the ballot" or if it goes on the ballot at all.

Board Chairman Matt Kuhn urged his fellow board members to approve the first reading because "I think we should keep moving forward. Let's keep moving down the road, especially since we're not committing to anything yet."

Hackman, though, disagreed and said that any funding the county would provide to EMS should come through the 28E agreement between the county and its cities that settled a lawsuit filed by the county in 2019 to get the cities to pay a portion of the ambulance contract the county had agreed to with the Chickasaw Ambulance Council.

In that settlement agreement, the county agreed to pay 40 percent of all future ambulance contracts while the cities agreed to pay the remainder of the contract on a per-capita basis.

"We spent thousands of dollars on the lawsuit for the 28E so I think the 28E is a good option," Hackman said. "If we go with this, get it on the ballot and it does pass, then it's the taxation of property."

Laudner on Monday told supervisors that because they wouldn't be committing to anything, he recommended they pass the first reading of the resolution. For it to be enacted, he also pointed out that two more readings would have to be approved.

"My recommendation is to continue down this path so we have parallel paths," Laudner said.

Supervisors agreed, or at least enough did as Kuhn, Jason Byrne and Tim Zoll all voted to move the resolution onto its second reading, which will take place at this coming Monday's meeting.

The passing of the resolution came during the same meeting in which board members discussed the installation of a new elevator at the courthouse and also received an update from a representative of Carbon Solutions, a company that hopes to put in a carbon pipeline that would run through Chickasaw County.

Start with the elevator that supervisors last month agreed to purchase and have installed by Schumacher Elevator Company. But during a meeting last week, Laudner had told the board that he felt that because the cost of the elevator was more than $100,000, the county, under state law, was required to go through the bidding process.

Kuhn told board members that he had spoken about with Schumacher officials, who "told me that if we broke the contract, they couldn't guarantee that they could complete the project or that their bid would be the same price as it was."

But because the contract that the county signed was for a little more than $207,000, Laudner stood by his statements from the previous week.

"It's a public improvement," Laudner said Monday morning, "and it's my opinion that it needs to go out for bid."

Laudner said he would contact Schumacher officials this week, and supervisors agreed to put off any decisions until next week.

The Board of Supervisors also heard an update on the proposed carbon pipeline — which would run from the Homeland Energy Solutions plant west to the Floyd County line — from Ben Fuller, an employee of TurnKey Logistics, who is representing Carbon Solutions.

"The goal of this project is to keep ethanol plants viable and successful," Fuller said, "and to keep the carbon out of the atmosphere."

He pointed out that 57 percent of Iowa's corn crop is purchased by ethanol plants and that the county could receive up to $1.8 million in tax revenue from the pipeline.

If built, the pipeline would run from the Homeland Energy Solutions plant that is located just to the west of Lawler to the Floyd County line. The entire pipeline would move through six states and move carbon to an underground storage facility in North Dakota.

Fuller said that, as of Monday, Carbon Solutions had reached agreements with landowners on 9.98 miles of the 20 miles the pipeline will need in Chickasaw County.

He said Carbon Solutions' goal is to reach what he called "voluntary agreements" with all landowners, but asked if he foresaw the company using eminent domain, Fuller conceded it was an option.

"There is a pathway to that as a last resort," he said, "but it's a place we'd really like to avoid. ... We feel good with where we're at so far and we'll keep working on it."

Fuller said that Carbon Solutions is aiming to receive approval from the Iowa Utilities Board for the pipeline by June 2023, and if that happens, construction would begin later that summer.

Students appreciate Turner's passion for their NHD projects out to teachers by invite only.

LMC officials said that Turner's experiences as the advisor of Nashua-Plainfield's powerhouse National History Day program and her involvement with organizations like the World War I Centennial Commission and the American Battle Monuments Commission made her a natural for the program.

"Honestly, I was a little surprised," she said about the invitation, "just because usually these kind of things are you fill out a bunch of paperwork and hope you get selected. This wasn't like that so it was totally unexpected."

While in Fort Scott, LMC Fellows will gain knowledge, educational resources and support in helping students cultivate a passion for learning through the creation of projects that initiate positive change. Fellows will be equipped to develop Unsung Heroes projects with their students, applying and evaluating the stories of these role models who have changed the world throughout history.

Turner will take part in the week-long program, beginning June 26, and among her peers will be the director of the Anne Frank House and Museum.

Although only Turner will be heading to Kansas in a few weeks, the veteran educator said that she believes the honor she has been given must be shared with a host of students, parents and staff members at Nashua-Plainfield.

Turner pointed out, for example, that Nashua residents Dave and Christine Skilton recently "walked me through" the National History Day process. She also said that she's been blessed by a multitude of "great students and supportive parents" who have helped the program become a mainstay at the national contest.

Those students, in turn, think the world of Turner.

"One thing you always know about Mrs. Turner is that she's going to push you to do the very best project," Caleb Sinnwell said in an interview last year after he won a national championship for his History Day project, "but at the same time, she gets just as excited seeing us get excited about studying something that's really interesting to us. I don't know how to say it, but she's a big part of why we do so well at National History Day. She never wants us to settle for 'just good,' if that makes any sense."

Turner, who has served as an instructional coach and the district's Talented and Gifted Program program for the past four years, laughed when asked about some of the "deadline" National History Day stories.

"We always say misery loves company," she said, "but as stressed as I get, as stressed as the students get, it's still an experience I hope they look back on as worthwhile."

Morgan Kapping, a 2018 Nashua-Plainfield graduate whose individual exhibit finished third in the nation, certainly believes it was.

"Just knowing how to put together a bibliography would have made it worth it," said the recent University of Northern Iowa graduate. "Seriously, we all have our Turner stories, but we also know that all she wanted for us was to make sure we put together the best project we could. A lot of us learned that to do that, you don't cut corners and as stressful as it was, it was fun."

Kapping paused and chuckled.

"Granted, we put her through a lot. I'm sure she'll tell you that."

Still, Turner has no regrets when it comes to National History Day.

"To see kids get excited about history, that's cool to me," she said, "and I think the other thing people don't always realize is that we're going up against some really powerhouse kids. At nationals, there are kids from boarding schools whose parents can fly their kids all around the globe, yet here we are. It shows our kids from little Nashua-Plainfield that 'hey, we belong.' That's huge to me."

Turner is a 1987 graduate of Nashua High School, and after realizing business wasn't her calling, she majored in education at the University of Northern Iowa. She taught for two years in Mason City, eight more in Charles City and spent a year with the Area Education Agency before coming to Nashua-Plainfield.

And over the years, she's learned more history than she's taught.

During a recent interview, she talked about how her students have found interesting topics — ranging from the story of the Comics Code Authority to the tale of Barbara Fassbinder, an Iowa nurse who was one of the first health providers to contract AIDS while working in the profession, to the epic sag of the Ghost Army that Sinnwell told in his national-title project.

But she also hopes that she has prepared her students for a lifelong love of learning.

"Some of the things we do might seem mundane," she said, "but when we're trying to get interviews, one of the things we really work on is to make sure we write a good email. I know that sounds a little strange, but the people our kids are requesting interviews from are busy and they get who-knows-how-many requests so we're always working to have ours stand out."

And, of course, there are those bibliographies.

"Probably the No. 1 thing I hear from returning students," she said with a laugh. "They'll tell me all their friends are freaking out about them for their papers and they're done in like 10 minutes."

silence before the TIC baseball game.

"Jeremy's spirit will always be present here on the field," said Potratz, whose son Alex, a Nashua-Plainfield student-athlete, was killed in an accident in 2013.

Iriarte — a 2007 N-P grad — was an all-conference Husky baseball standout that batted .333 his senior year. Iriarte played right field and also excelled in football, track and boys golf. Iriarte also coached youth sports at N-P.

"It would mean a lot to him," said

Amber Iriarte, Jeremy's wife. "He was big into baseball all through high school. He was a really good player."

Money was donated by fans in attendance that placed cash in a ball cap. N-P teacher Sam Brown and his students helped organize a dodgeball tournament fundraiser for the Iriarte's last April. Proceeds from that event also went towards the Iriarte family.

Jeremy — who wore No. 8 on his Husky baseball uniform — worked as a Floyd County Sheriff's Deputy for six years prior to becoming Nashua's Police Chief. Then the Army Reservist headed to Kuwait in 2020 for military deployment.

"We wanted to do something to honor Jeremy," said Jeremy's older brother John Iriarte.

Potratz helped organize the fundraising effort last week.

"It's kind of one of those small-town things where we got a great place and we want people to be taken care of," said Miller. "Unfortunately, we lost one of our own — great guy, great family. It was pretty cool of Kevin to kind of take the reins on that."

Board approves Floyd County budget, dings county on stipend

By BOB STEENSON

bsteenson@charlescitypress.com

In an action that was finished half a minute after it started, a state board ruled Monday that Floyd County does not have to change its budget for the upcoming 2022-23 fiscal year despite significant property tax increases, but it did say that the county supervisors improperly approved a small stipend for extra duties performed for the board by the county auditor.

A hearing on a protest of next fiscal year's Floyd County budget was forced by 274 county residents who signed a petition. The hearing was held May 11 at the county fairgrounds and lasted more than an hour and a half. The decision on that hearing was made by the State Appeal Board at its regular meeting Monday afternoon, and took 32 seconds.

The State Appeal Board is made up of Iowa Treasurer Michael Fitzgerald, Auditor of State Rob Sand and Director of the Department of Management Kraig Paulsen, although Sand was absent Monday.

After a few other matters on the agenda, Paulsen, the chair of the board, moved on to the Floyd County protest. He asked if there was any conversation or questions regarding the May 11 hearing panel's report and recommendation, which the board members had received prior to the meeting but which had not been released to the public.

There was no discussion and the recommendation passed 2-0.

The petitioners, represented at the May 11 meeting by the Coalition for Better County Government, had alleged that the county had not properly notified the public regarding various aspects of the budget approval process.

The group also argued that the county did not properly maintain meeting minutes or record votes, had improperly increased taxes rather than reduce spending, and planned to improperly spend American Rescue Plan Act money on the new law enforcement center and courthouse update project.

The panel which held the hearing at the fairgrounds was made up of four representatives of the state treasurer's office, auditor's office and the Department of Management.

The panel's 10-page report, which the Press received after the Monday afternoon meeting, includes a summary of the arguments made by Coalition representative Michael Byrnes, a Mason City attorney, and the county's response by Supervisor Chair Doug Kamm and Auditor Gloria Carr, as well as a summary of the pertinent Iowa laws and the panel's recommendation.

The report said that a member of the panel had reviewed the county's evidence of posting public notices regarding budget public hearings and found them to be in order.

The Coalition had especially contested the posting of that information on the county's website and the auditor's Facebook page, but the panel's recommendation said that Carrie Johnson, property valuation and county budget administrator with the Iowa Department of Management and the presiding officer at the May 11 hearing, had viewed the newspaper proof of publications and the notices on the county web site and auditor's Facebook page, and information submitted by the county auditor regarding the web site posting, and "determined they were substantially compliant with the statutory publishing and posting requirements."

"The statutory language requiring posting of notice on website/s and social media includes no requirement for proof of such electronic publication. Floyd County attested to proper notification via the resolution to approve the Maximum Levy," it wrote.

The report also said the double-digit increase in property tax rates which the Coalition protested "is caused by the effort to increase General Supplemental Fund balance from minus-$596,043 to $493,036 and to cover budgeted expenditures," and then cited the portion of the Iowa Code which covers the things that the basic property tax levies and supplemental levies can be used for.

Regarding the use of ARPA funds, the report which the State Appeal Board approved said that, "Expenditures for the Law Enforcement Center/Courthouse would be an allowed use of those funds under the U.S. Department of Treasury document 'Coronavirus State & Local Fiscal Recovery Funds — Overview of the Final Rule.'"

It said there were four things that the money specifically could not be used for, and a jail and other construction were not among those four things.

The order approved by the State Appeal Board states, "The petitioners did not meet the burden of proof requirement to justify a reduction in the FY2023 budget. The county met the burden of proof requirement for the increases in the FY2023 budget."

The one area where the State Appeal Board required a change in the budget had to do with a $1,000 annual stipend which the Board of Supervisors had approved for Auditor Carr, because of the extra work she does for the board regarding budgeting and other items that is not part of the statutory requirement of her position.

The state board ruled that the state auditor had previously determined in a case in Decatur County that additional pay for elected officials above that recommended by the county compensation board could not be approved by the supervisors and was a violation of state statute.

The board's formal order approved Monday states, "Based on the information provided by the parties involved and the Iowa Code, the State Appeal Board sustains the FY2023 budget as adopted, with the exception of a $1,000 reduction to expenses to void the improper stipend provided the County Auditor."

Supervisor Linda Tjaden said after the state board meeting was over, "I believe we have demonstrated we are following the Code of Iowa regarding meeting notices, agenda and minutes and being transparent to the citizens of Floyd County."

State trap meet continues to grow

TRAPSHOOTING: FROM 1

N-P sophomore J.R. O'Neill. Oleson said over 4,000 shooters competed in the 2021 Iowa SCTP (Scholastic Clay Target Program) State Trap meet last year. He said trapshooting is the fastest growing prep high school sport in the midwest.

"We're talking about adding another trap and having intermediates - which would be junior high kids," Oleson added.

Oleson remembers over 35 years ago competing at state when the scene was a lot different than it was today.

"I shot in the first one back in 1985 and there was 90 kids that shot in it," Oleson said.

CC/NP's home shooting range is the Nashua Fish & Game Club.

"They're actually on our territory," smiled O'Neil.

The Nashua Fish & Game Gun Club sponsors the Comets and Huskies and has been competing at state since 2005. That year there were five team members on that squad.

"It's really blossomed," said Oleson.

O'Neill said he'll have four chances in the morning at state and four more opportunities later that afternoon to rack up 25 connected hits of clays in a row - which is called a 25-straight.

Husky sophomore Micaiah Groothuis talked about what he likes about bringing his shotgun to the state tournament and competing against hundreds of schools from across the state that all meet at one general locale at the Cedar Falls Gun Club this weekend.

"There's like 36 trap houses there and several thousand people," said Groothuis. "You're walking along and you just see people. There's people everywhere."

There's no ill will amongst Nashua-Plainfield teammates even though the vast majority of the split squad hails from Charles City.

Last-minute visit by Iowa governor thrills owner of new Charles City bookstore

By JAMES GROB
jjgrob@charlescitypress.com

Iowa Gov. Kim Reynolds said she was impressed with Charles City's new bookstore.

"I think it's really unique, and evidently it's a hot spot to be," Reynolds said. "We wanted to encourage people to come out and check this store out, but apparently they already are."

Just ask O'Neill, who went out for the Husky track squad last year but decided to give trapshooting a go this spring.

"There's a Charles City world and there's Nashua world. As a shooting team, it is very much separated - but we're all buds," said O'Neill. "It just makes it more fun as a team to have different schools together competing under the same name."

Oleson, who has been a CC/NP head coach for the last seven years, said there are five team members from N-P that comprise his split squad of 32. CC/NP's top shooter is Charles City senior Colton Crooks.

"I'm from Nashua, but I know a lot of people from Charles City. I don't consider one school any different than the other," said Oleson.

There's no riding bench in the sport of trapshooting, which Oleson feels creates a stronger bond amongst teammates.

"We're a closer knit group because nobody sits - everybody plays, everybody shoots," said Oleson. "This is kind of a big happy group."

CC/NP defeated the New Hampton Chickasaws at their home invite earlier this year. That was a big feather in the cap of Oleson's squad as New Hampton has proven to be a consistent winner in the sport over the years.

"The kids were pretty excited about that. The kids shot lights out" said Oleson.

Oleson said that CC/NP is one of the few trapshooting squads in this corner of the state that is combined and competes against one another.

"We can actually have our own shoot just by showing up," said Oleson.

CC/NP team members mentioned there have been sixty-nine 25-straight accomplishments this season and nine 50-strights.

N-P sophomore Dawson Demro, along with freshmen Cameron Cleveland and Nic Brase, are the other Huskies that compete for the split squad.

Nashua City Councilwoman Samantha Johnson and Mayor Alex Anthofer look over documents dealing with the county's ambulance issue during Monday night's City Council meeting that was held at the Gateway to Northeast Iowa Welcome Center.

EMS startup cost could be around $75,000 for city that cost does not include operational expense such as dispatch service and a benefits package for staffing.

Five Ambulance Council representatives that represent the cities within the county - New Hampton, Alta Vista, Bassett, Fredericksburg, Ionia, Lawler, Nashua and North Washington - are planning on adjusting their financial numbers to bring forth to their City Councils to possibly amend their budgets to potentially fund a new EMS run by Chickasaw County. That could signal a new service could possibly be up and running at the start of the year.

Johnson said Nashua's per-capita contribution to the potential startup would be roughly $75,000.

"The Board of Supervisors wants to know who's on board before they decide to fork out this $1.7 million," said Johnson. "The biggest problem that we're going to face is in the numbers that Stephanie Mashek (Chickasaw County Auditor) gave me. I believe the numbers that we have here are the high-end."

Chickasaw County Sheriff Marty Hemann stated that Fredericksburg voted 4-1 at its most recent Council meeting to go along with the potential startup EMS. He said the current cost for Fredericksburg would be around $100,000 - almost five times what the town's current contribution of $20,000 to the privately-run EMS is. Hemann said a loss of $20,000 is projected in its first year in terms of what Fredericksburg's bottom line could be after Year 1.

"The first year you're not going to be making a lot of money, but by Year 3, they're projecting it to break even," said Hemann. "They had a lot of the same discussions that you guys did as well. They're looking for at the end of December - we need something."

Hemann also stated those financial figures could change based off of how much Medicaid and Medicare is reimbursed, as well as what the call volume is in each town's respective cities.

"I personally think in the long run we will benefit from it," said Johnson. "I think a full-time, in-house staff is where we're going to see the biggest difference."

The Council also made a decision on whether or not to impose municipal infractions or nuisance abatement procedures for properties as it pertains to overgrowth, weeds, etc. A $100 minimum infraction fee was decided upon. That is based off of a $100 an hour cost for the city to mow the property.

City Clerk John Ott also stated that $29,000 of the $40,000 cost to repair the roof of the powerhouse would be covered by insurance.

Grassley will face challenge from retired admiral of Supervisors District 2) and David Laudner (county attorney) while the Democrats who earned spots on November's ballot included Jason Byrne (Board of Supervisors District 2), Shirley Troyna (county recorder) and Keith Hoey (county treasurer).

Meanwhile, businessman Charley Thomson easily secured the Republican nomination for the newly-drawn Iowa House District 58, which includes all of Chickasaw County, most of Floyd County and a sizable chunk of Berner County, including the city of Plainfield.

Thomson garnered 1,140 votes while Jim Wright finished a distant second with 616 votes and Sean Gallagher garnered 309 votes.

No Democrats filed for the seat in the district that is home to Rep. Todd Prichard, D-Charles City. Prichard announced earlier this year that he would not seek a sixth term in the Iowa House.

Among state races, the most anticipated race coming into Tuesday was the one for the Democratic nomination to take on U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley, the 88-year-old Republican, who was first elected to the Senate in 1980.

Grassley easily turned back a primary challenge from Jim

Carlin and will now face retired U.S. Navy Admiral Michael Franken

Voter turnout in Chickasaw County was relatively light for the primary as Auditor Stephanie Mashek reported that only 1,406 of the 8,299 registered voters, 16.9 percent, cast ballots either during the early voting period that ran through Monday or during the 13 hours the polls were open on Tuesday.

CHICKASAW COUNTY DELINQUENT TAX LIST

NOTICE OF TAX SALE AND DELINQUENT TAX LIST OFFICE OF CHICKASAW COUNTY TREASURER NEW HAMPTON, IOWA SALE DATE JUNE 20, 2022
I, Sue Breitbach, Treasurer of Chickasaw County, Iowa, hereby give notice as required by law, that on the third Monday of June at 10:00 A.M., the date being June 20, 2022, the Chickasaw County Tax Sale will be held online. The online auction site can be accessed by registered bidders by going to www.iowataxauction.com. We will offer for sale all properties having delinquent taxes and special assessments. This list may contain properties that are in bankruptcy proceedings. The properties in bankruptcy will not be offered for sale.
The following listing of properties subject to taxation includes delinquent real estate taxes, delinquent mobile home taxes and delinquent special assessments. The sale will be for the total of all taxes due and unpaid up to the time and date of sale. All properties remaining unsold on the sale date will be offered at subsequent tax sales, held on a continuing basis.
All names and property descriptions bearing no specific designations are tax listings for unpaid taxes for the 2020 assessment year, payable September 2021 thru March 2022. All those bearing the symbol (*) are two year delinquent taxes that remain unpaid and will be offered for Public Bidder's Sale. If the Public Bidder Sale properties remain unsold, they must be sold to Chickasaw County.
As provided by Chapter 446.14 Code of Iowa "No irregularity or informality in the advertisement shall affect the legality of the sale or the title to a parcel conveyed by the Treasurer's deed under this chapter and Chapters 447 and 448, and in all cases, its provisions shall be sufficient notice to the owners of the sale of the parcel."
If the property is not redeemed pursuant to Chapter 447 of the Code of Iowa, the right of redemption expires and a tax deed may issue.

Huskies back home against West Fork in TIC doubleheader

BASEBALL: FROM 1

"Bo went out and gave a gusty performance. He was spectacular. His curve ball was on. He was just nasty."

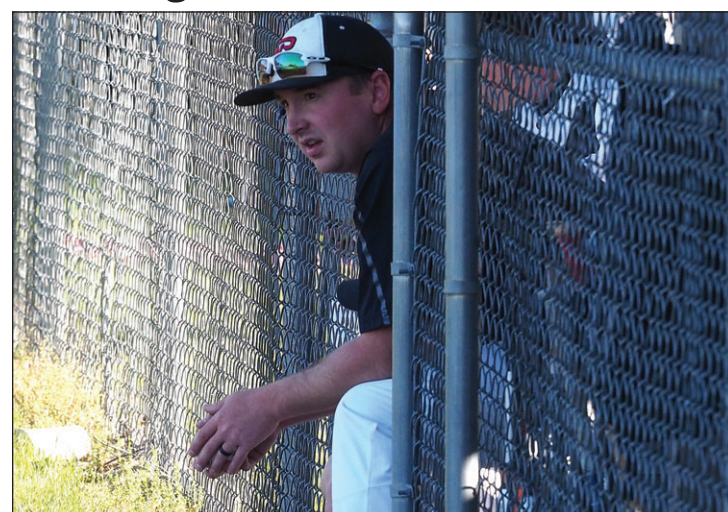

The Huskies started out well in the offensive department against the Bearcats as they plated all of their runs in the first two innings.

N-P sophomore Tucker Franzen and Harrington each rapped out two hits apiece. Max Hillegas, a senior, knocked in three runs and also doubled.

Hillegas started against Osage and did not have his best stuff. He pitched four innings and gave up four earned runs. He struck out nine and walked three.

"Right now we're not doing the little things right," said Miller. "Pitching-wise, we gotta stay ahead and attack hitters early on in the count. Because when we're getting behind, hitters know what's coming."

McKade Munn, also a senior, tripled against Kee and amassed two RBI.

N-P freshman Dawson Glaser started that contest against the Hawks and gave up two earned runs and struck out two batters.

"Glaser was fantastic," said Miller.

N-P traveled down to Gilbertville on Thursday to take on another Class 1A stalwart in the seventh-rated Don Bosco Dons. Then it's back home for an important twinbill with West Fork tonight (Friday).

Huskies looking to break skid on softball diamond

By KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

There are wins out there for the Nashua-Plainfield softball team this summer.

It's just a matter of stopping the bleeding for head coach Jessica Stastny-Hall and her Huskies.

N-P lost its 11 consecutive game on Wednesday after New Hampton thumped the Huskies, 15-3, in an area non-conference clash.

N-P fell to 1-11 overall and has not won a game since a 13-9 triumph over Rockford in the season opener. The Huskies get a rematch with the Warriors this coming Monday in Plainfield.

"We're young," said Stastny-Hall. "I know the girls are frustrated. They're down on themselves. Nobody wants to constantly keep losing. We're in a very long losing streak which hopefully gets snapped pretty soon."

The Huskies dropped a Top of Iowa Conference battle with Osage, 11-1, last week Thursday. When N-P took part in the Hudson Tournament on Saturday against the likes of Janesville, 12th-rated Grundy Center and Dunkerton.

N-P rallied back against the 12th-rated Spartans in the second game of the weekend tournament after Grundy Center scored all of its runs in the first two innings.

N-P freshman catcher Paige Franzen registered three hits in that contest and knocked in two runs. Stastny-Hall said Franzen threw out six would-be base stealers in the tournament.

N-P senior pitcher Brynn Wright pitched five innings and allowed five earned runs. She struck out two batters and walked three against Grundy Center.

Since Thursday's loss to Osage, N-P has played seven games in seven days.

"We've had a long streak of games. We have three more games to battle through before we can work out the kinks on Tuesday," said Stastny-Hall.

That's when N-P will practice and try to shore up the miscues that have prevented them from being competitive in a slew of games that have ended early because of the run-rule this year.

N-P (1-11, 1-6) played in two wild games versus Janesville and Dunkerton at the Hudson Tourney. Janesville rallied to stun the Huskies with six runs in the bottom of the seventh to steal a victory over N-P, 13-10. Dunkerton scored all of its runs in the first two innings of a high-scoring 13-11 game the Raiders were able to be claimed victors in. N-P plated three runs apiece in the final three frames.

N-P was busy on the base paths in each contest as the Huskies stole 10 bases against Janesville and eight against Dunkerton. N-P shortstop Lainie Bouillon swiped five bases against the Wildcats and scored four runs. N-P freshman outfielder Kadence Huck led the Huskies with three hits in that contest.

Jalynn Pratt, N-P's sophomore third baseman/pitcher collected four RBI versus Dunkerton. She also shut down the Raiders in four innings of relief, striking out two.

"Pratt stepped up and pitched the Dunkerton game. She came in and shut them down. I know Pratt can pitch," said Stastny-Hall. "It's just having the confidence."

North Butler (4-6, 3-4), a state tournament team from a year ago, saw the Bearcats' senior pitcher – Kiya Johnson – record a two-hitter on Monday over the Huskies in a 12-1 win.

West Fork, now also recently ranked like Grundy Center as the 15th-best team in Class 2A, benefitted from freshman ace Libby Trewin, who tossed a one-hit shutout in the Warhawks 12-0 win over N-P on Tuesday.

N-P played at South Winneshiek in Calmar on Thursday and hosts West Fork in a doubleheader in Plainfield tonight (Friday).

Huskies pick up TIC road win

Coach believes Nashua-Plainfield's tough slate will pay dividends in postseason

By KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

Don't let the record deceive you – the Nashua-Plainfield Huskies can bring it.

It may just be a matter of time before these Huskies break out – big time.

Nashua-Plainfield busted a three-game losing streak on Monday with a 7-3 win over the North Butler Bearcats and then gave fourth-ranked Kee High all they could handle the ensuing evening on Tuesday in a non-conference tilt held at Upper Iowa University.

The highly-rated Hawks – the state runner-up from last year in Class 1A – plated five runs in the top of the seventh inning to break a 2-2 stalemate to claim the 7-2 win over Levi Miller's squad.

"We just kind of handed them some runs with walks and hit batters. I can't tell Kee that they earned it," said Miller. "They're a fantastic club, obviously, but we competed right with them."

N-P ended last week with a rally against Osage on Friday night at home that fell short. N-P trailed 4-0 before plating three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to tie the Top of Iowa Conference contest at 5-5. The Huskies would let that chance at victory slip away late, though, as the Green Devils' offense piled on eight more runs in the final three frames to take a 13-7 league triumph.

"Baseball is riding the wave," said Miller. "Right now we're learning how to ride the wave. It's interesting, but it's good. We're gonna get it figured out."

After that Kee loss, N-P fell to 2-6 overall and 2-5 in TIC play. While Miller isn't so much as concerned about his team's overall record, victories are still important in order to gain some momentum headed into postseason play. District play is less than three weeks away as preliminary round postseason competition in the small-school classes start on Thursday June 30.

"The state shortened us by a week so we've got one less week to figure it out before districts. I know this team can, it's just a matter of when," said Miller. "I just want to get these guys going big time and going in the right direction where they know what to do."

N-P junior Bo Harrington came out firing on the hill against NB to snap the Huskies' mini-losing skid. He punched out batters repeatedly over the course of his six innings of work. He struck out seven and allowed just two earned runs.

"We know when Bo is on the mound we're going to be in the game, anytime," said Miller.
