Nashua explores EMS option

AMR will provide ambulance service to city if it can 'work it out with Charles City and Floyd'

By KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

On paper, the deal looks pretty good.

It's some of the best news the Nashua City Council has heard in quite some time.

In what could potentially be a significant development concerning the town of Nashua's quest to obtain reliable ambulance service, city officials have been in contact with Charles City and AMR (American Medical Response) about possibly filling a void in service once the town of 1,500 sees its current EMS contract run out at the end of the year.

That new information was gleaned from a regular Nashua City Council meeting that was held on Monday.

While talks and negotiations are essentially in the preliminary stages, Nashua Mayor Alex Anthofer said he has asked Charles City and AMR for a six month-contract for approximately $15,000 to $20,000 that would start ambulance service on Jan. 1, 2023 and run through June 30 of that year.

"We had asked for six months to follow along with Charles City," said Anthofer. "AMR said yes, as long as we can talk with and work it out with Charles City and Floyd. AMR said it would work. We just have to have it approved by them."

Nashua backed out of the 28E Agreement with seven other towns that could potentially start up an EMS through Chickasaw County and its Board of Supervisors. The publicly-owned ambulance service is hoping to run off a tentative million-dollar budget that could increase or decrease depending on which towns commit to the undertaking.

Now Nashua is exploring other options and going in a completely

Fun under the 'Big Top'

CIRCUS OFFERS PLENTY OF ENTERTAINMENT DURING STOP AT THE FAIRGROUNDS

By KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

The circus is alive and well – at least in Nashua, Iowa.

Last week Friday morning, the Culpepper & Merriweather Circus rolled its trucks and trailers on to a vacant spot on the Big 4 Fairgrounds in Nashua.

In what was a fascinating transformation, the empty area of grass was quickly built into a big top with quick precision and teamwork.

Soon, underneath the raised tent, seats were constructed that would soon be filled after a long line of children with their families gathered later that afternoon waiting to see a tradition that is centuries old.

There was cotton candy, lions, juggling, aerial artistry and "The Wheel of Death."

Of course the jammed-pack crowd was entertained by the

Supervisor wants to keep Heritage property

Hackman makes a pitch to turn the old county home into a government office building

By BOB FENSKA
editor@nhtrib.com

A Chickasaw County Board of Supervisor member once again on Monday reiterated his opposition to selling the Heritage property, but other supervisors said they want to see what the bids are before they make a final decision.

Bids for the Heritage building and adjacent property — excluding the farmland that the county currently rents out — are due by Friday,

Aug. 19, and board members are set to discuss the possible sale at their meeting on Monday, Aug. 22.

Jake Hackman, who joined Tim Zoll last month in voting against a resolution to sell the property, said there are a number of reasons he believes the county should keep the building that for the previous nine years has been occupied by Inspiring Lives.

"I don't know why we're selling it," he said and then referred to the ambulance issue. "If you guys are going with EMS/EMA, why don't we just move those guys to the Community Services Building. It has bathrooms, it has showers, it has garage, it has the EOC. You can make living quarters in that building easy."

Hackman's suggested that the county would be better off moving the current Community Services Building occupants — Public Health and Environmental Health — to the Heritage. He also

County moves ahead with ambulance service without Nashua and Alta Vista

Board of Supervisors vote 3-1 to sign 28E agreements with six cities, discuss hiring consultant to help get service up and running

By BOB FENSKA
editor@nhtrib.com

After months of what seemed like countless discussions and meetings, the Chickasaw County Board of Supervisors Wednesday made a publicly-owned ambulance service a reality by signing 28E agreements with six of the county's cities.

The board approved the 28E agreements with Fredericksburg, Lawler, Ionia, New Hampton, North Washington and Bassett, all on 3-1 votes. Board Chairman Matt Kuhn, Jason Byrne and Steve Bretibach voted in favor of the agreements while Jake Hackman was the lone dissenting vote on all six of the agreements. Supervisor Tim Zoll did not attend the meeting.

Before the board voted separately on each of the agreements, County Attorney David Laudner reminded the board what it was committing to by signing the agreements.

"Just so you're aware," he said, "once you sign all these, you're on the hook for an ambulance service. So the work begins."

The idea of starting a county-owned ambulance service began late last summer, when the late Rick Holthaus, the Board of Supervisors chairman who passed away in January, began discussing the idea. He made the proposal publicly for the first time in November and discussions have been held not only in the county board room but at city council meetings all around the county since then.

Two cities — Nashua and Alta Vista — decided not to sign their agreements. Nashua's demand to have an requisite funny man, comedian/jester – “Leo the Clown.”

This was small-town Americana at its finest.

Simone Key, the tall and attractive redhead that is owner of C&M Circus along with her husband Trey, said people are clamoring to come to the circus – especially after COVID-19 forced so many people to remain inside and outside attractions were limited.

“Obviously COVID hit a lot of us pretty hard – you can’t necessarily do the Disney vacation. But you can take your family to the circus and our prices are all very reasonable. We keep our prices as low as we can – that’s super important to us,” said Simone.

Simone is a third-generation circus performer and an integral part of the traveling troupe that puts on shows 32 weeks out of the year (March until October).

C&M’s 90-minute show was performed twice in Nashua, then it was off to Oelwein the following day for two Saturday matinees.

This particular circus travels to over 200 towns in 17 different states and puts on about 500 shows a year.

“We went out for a partial season last year and then a full season last year and the response has just been insane. People are so ready to do something. The cool thing about what we do is – we go to the smaller towns,” said Simone.

C&M moved its operations from Arizona to Hugo, Oklahoma in 2001 – the same year Trey bought the company.

Simone was raised around the circus.

“I’ve been on the road every year of my life except the COVID year,” said Simone.

Simone – along with Kelly Leeth – rose high above the fascinated onlookers sitting in their seats to put on a display of aerial tricks, called cradle.

Simone wears many hats, so to speak, in C&M’s circus act. She plays the part of ringleader as well as performing juggling acts. She started riding unicycles and perfecting the art of trapeze when most kids start going to school – at around five or six years of age.

“The show is almost a small part of what we do,” said Simone. “It’s kind of the easier part of our day.”

There’s also the logistics and getting everything from Point A to Point B – setting everything up and getting all the permits, she said.

Many in the crowd are amazed during a tightrope act that was part of the circus.

While circuses across the nation have seen an overall decline – some of them are making a comeback.

The most famous circus – Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus ceased operations in 2017. But “The Greatest Show on Earth” announced just this past May that after a five-year hiatus, the gigantic circus operation would resume touring in 2023, albeit without animals.

“It definitely is kind of evolving,” said Simone about the circus industry. “There’s just a lot more circus influences that I think are in all sorts of entertainment now. Like in Vegas, I went for my sister’s bachelorette party. They were doing like a circus theme and had aerialists and stuff. They’re getting to do Water for Elephants on Broadway.”

Areas along the west coast have seen an uptick and resurgence in circus shows traveling to those towns that might have never had a circus come to their communities or at least in a long time, Simone said.

“One of our best markets is Oregon and Washington – because not many shows get up there,” said Simone. “It’s hard to take a bunch of RVs and trucks and trailers all the way up to the northwest like that.”

Simone said C&M’s crew consists of about 30 people and 13 vehicles. There’s 10 performers and many of them entertain folks in several different high-wire acts or funny bits that keep the crowd laughing and on the edge of their seat.

Simone said the experience is for the fans – who pay a reasonable price to attend an event like the circus that may only come to their town every three or four years. The last time the circus performed in Nashua was 2016.

“I don’t want people to come here and just be able to afford the ticket. I want them to be able to ride a pony, take home a souvenir. That’s super important to us, that we keep it very affordable,” said Simone.

C&M’s main sponsor was the Big 4 Chamber of Commerce, headed by Val Johnson.

“They get a portion of ticket sales, so part of the money goes back into the community,” said Simone.

Simone said she loves what she does and wants to continue working in the long-standing family business and an industry that has thrilled onlookers since the late 1700s. She talked about what she loves best about the circus.

“It’s because it’s more of lifestyle than a job,” said Simone. “I’ve waitressed in 2020 and got to experience a 9 to 5 situation. Like here, I’m working with my dad. I’m working with my husband. I’m working with my family. We just kind of hang out all day. You are working and it is obviously a lot of work. There’s some days when it’s really hard and other days when it’s easy.”

County will accept bids on Heritage through Aug. 19 but can ‘reject all bids’

suggested that the county sell its building on East Main Street and move those offices to the Heritage.

He referred to an offer made by current Chickasaw Ambulance Service owner Jeremy McGrath to sell a building located just off the downtown area in New Hampton to the county for $400,000.

“We won’t know this until the 22nd, I get that,” Hackman said, “[but] are we even going to get $400,000 for the Heritage property? ...

“I still think we are jumping the gun here by selling that building.”

But Supervisor Jason Byrne countered, saying the board still has the right to keep the building.

“That’s why we have the right to reject all bids,” Byrne said.

Zoll, meanwhile, even suggested putting a county-owned ambulance service at the Heritage.

“It’s 30 seconds to get on the interstate [Highway 63] to go down to 346 and go to Nashua or Fredericksburg,” he said. “Their chute time would be less than a minute.”

Board of Supervisors Chairman Matt Kuhn expressed his frustration with Hackman.

“Why did you bring up selling this then,” Kuhn said, “if you’re saying we should keep the building?”

Hackman responded quickly and said, “I might have said it once – back in November or December – but from then on out, it was no sale.”

He said he was the only supervisor who attended an open house of sorts last Friday, when the county opened the building so prospective buyers could tour the facility.

And Hackman said he heard an oft-heard refrain.

“I heard from 10 of those people who toured it,” he said, “why are we selling it? ... It might take an extra two-stall garage [at the Community Services Building], you know, to house the Rescue Squad, if need be.”

He also suggested that the Heritage could be the “911 dispatch center, that could be the new jail.”

Kuhn said he understood that Hackman had every right to change his mind about the property but admitted that “it’s just frustrating.”

“Do we listen to our taxpayers, Hackman said, “or do we listen to you, Jason, Steve or Tim?”

In the end, board members didn’t take any action and will continue to accept bids on the building until 4 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 19.

Nashua Mayor Alex Anthofer looks over documents during Monday night's City Council meeting, when city leaders discussed ways to deal with the issue of ambulance service in the city.

Nashua explores longterm EMS options

AMBULANCE: FROM 1

different direction. Nashua City Council member Rhonda Dean, along with various members of the Nashua Fire Department, attended an ad-hoc committee on Tuesday of this week to come up with potential solutions for an EMS in Nashua.

That could include Nashua's own start-up EMS or creating a partnership with Waverly. That EMS is run by the Waverly Health Center and services Butler and Bremer counties.

"People that I've talked to or that have talked to me about this in the community – nothing's changed my mind yet," said Dean.

EMS support for each of those eight towns – New Hampton, Nashua, Alta Vista, Bassett, Ionia, North Washington, Fredericksburg and Lawler – runs out Dec. 31 of this year and is currently being provided by Chickasaw Ambulance Service, a private entity run by Jeremy McGrath. He has stated he has no interest in providing ambulance service for the county after that date.

Nashua's main stumbling block in accepting the 28E Agreement is money. Nashua's portion of a per-capita pie that each town would have to pay into is over $158,000. Per the rough draft, the contract is for five years and there are numerous clauses in the contract that are enacted should cities opt out of the deal after signing on the dotted line.

Dean said there were 92 calls for service last year that had a Nashua address through the current service – although it wasn't determined how many of those were in the city limits or in rural areas.

That breakdown on cost per call on a monthly basis is $13,200 according to Dean. The cost per call would be $1,700.

John Ott, Nashua's City Clerk, has been in contact with Charles City Administrator Steve Diers about having AMR potentially cover the Nashua City limits and providing EMS support.

"He seemed very on board with being able to help the city of Nashua out," said Ott about his talks with Diers. "Again, that's all very preliminary."

Ott said Charles City and Floyd County work with AMR on a contract where the price is already fixed.

"From the discussions that I've had, what AMR is saying is they have enough staffing and stuff that they can cover us," said Ott. "We would basically be subsidizing Charles City and Floyd County – so whatever they would want to charge us to offset that cost."

Of course any contract signed would require pen and paper and a thorough review, not to mention approval from Council members.

Nashua City Attorney David Skilton made sure everyone in attendance in the Council Chambers understood that point.

"They seemed receptive. It's a matter of cost. Before anything is really talked about – it has to be in writing for Council to review," said Skilton. "As the Council knows, we have to be concerned with cost and saving money when we can. We're that tight."

At prior meetings, Nashua City Council members have stated that along with that $158,000 and the current contract for law enforcement service with Chickasaw County – that total is two-thirds of the city of Nashua's general fund.

"We're basically trying to get us something to cover the area for six more months until we can have something in line and help offset our budget that we already have set for this fiscal year," said Anthofer about the potential union with Charles City and AMR.

County to start EMS service without Nashua, Alta Vista

ambulance stationed in the city was not met, and Alta Vista has decided to use an ambulance service that will be based in Elma, which is just 4.3 miles away.

Currently, the county and its cities receive their EMS service through the Chickasaw County Ambulance Council, which has a contract with the privately-owned Chickasaw Ambulance Service that runs through this Dec. 31.

Hackman said he voted no because not all of the cities had decided to join forces.

"I don't know how the county can start an ambulance service when not all county government agencies are included," he said. "There are going to be a lot of issues in here ... The county service should be for all the county residents ... They're either all in or all out because it's going to come down to a finance issue – representation without taxation."

Byrne, though, said that he felt comfortable with the board's decision and Kuhn added that the absence of Nashua and Alta Vista from the county-owned service wasn't because of a lack of effort.

"Eighty percent of the county wants to stay together," Byrne said, "Hopefully the other 20 percent joins in at some point."

"I think I did my part to try and work things out," Kuhn said and added after the meeting that "we did everything we could to get this going with the entire county but if it's having the whole county together and not having an ambulance or having most of the county together with an ambulance, that's an easy choice for me."

Earlier in the meeting, the supervisors discussed a proposal from Iowa Falls EMS Director Corey Larson to provide consulting services to help get the county-owned service up and running.

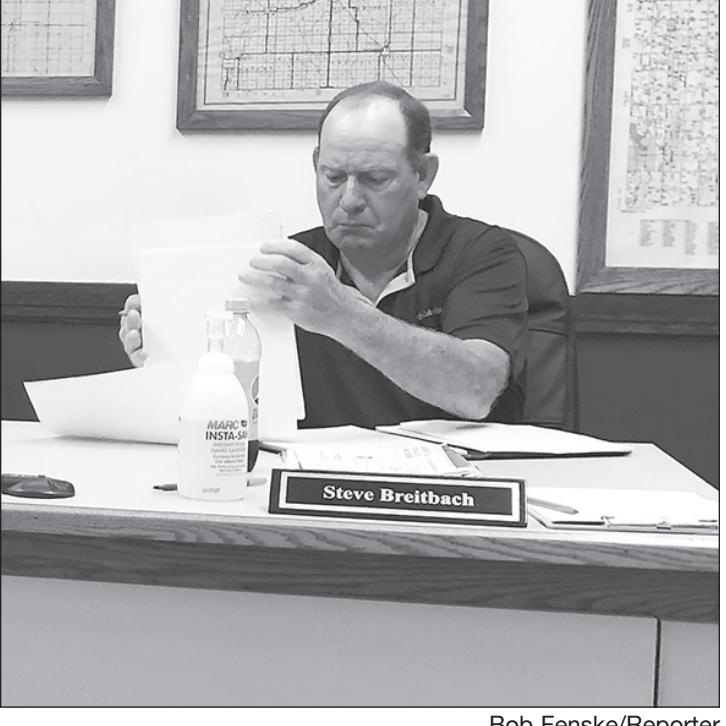

Kuhn said Larson would not charge the county for the work, including coming up with several different budgets for the service he has done in recent weeks. But he would charge $22,500 to perform 17 "scope of work" duties that included development of job descriptions, salary and wage recommendations, and assisting the county in obtaining the proper licenses and accreditations.

Chickasaw Ambulance Service owner Jeremy McGrath reminded the board that part of his offer to sell the county ambulances, equipment and a building he owns in New Hampton for a little more than $1.7 million also included providing many of those same consulting services Larson is offering.

Supervisors, though, said they were worried about using American Recovery Plan Act (ARPA) funds without going through a bid process to hire a consultant.

"These are audit questions," Laudner said. "Sorry, I'm not trying to beg off, but this is not my area of expertise."

Laudner said he would contact the State Auditor's Office for guidance while supervisors voted 3-1 to ask Larson to put together a potential contract that they will consider at their meeting this coming Monday.

TAYLOR TIPS:

Injury Prevention

Exercise and maintaining an active lifestyle are critical to health and wellness. Nothing derails our wellness train like an injury. Here are some quick and easy tips to follow to ensure you keep your wellness plan rolling in the right direction:

- Maintain proper nutrition. Food is fuel and you must put the right things in to get good out. With strength training and as we age sufficient protein consumption is vitally important.
- Stretch. Priming muscles before you exercise prevents strain during vigorous activity.
- Hydration, hydration, hydration!

- Get enough rest. Our body recovers from the traumas of the day when we sleep, this includes tissue break down that occurs with exercise.

- Talk to a professional before beginning a new exercise routine. Talk to your physician to be sure you are healthy enough to begin a new routine. A therapist can evaluate movement patterns to ensure you have proper joint mobility and stability to initiate the routine you are considering.

- Learn proper technique.
- Listen to your body.

Keep these simple steps in mind and get moving. Exercise is Medicine!

the results from the initial finding.

"They're coming for Phase 1 already because we had gotten pre-approval," said Ott.

The $2.3 million Greeley St. Project has been stalled and startup of that water/wastewater/storm water/road under-taking has been delayed.

Nashua was declined for a $600,000 CDBG (Community Development Block Grant) that it had applied for.

"We were kind of on the low end of the project spectrum, even though there's a lot of funding out there," said Ott. "Our project didn't score very high, mainly because it didn't service a lot of people."

Origin Design is doing the engineering on the street project and Ott stated there is approximately $68,000 left out of a $100,000 work scope budget left that the city can spend.

"We can continue with the final design so that the project is shovel ready and that way if any money comes along and they open up any funding or anything else happens – we would probably be higher up on the list if you're shovel ready," said Ott about possible additional funding or financing that could come through.

The Council agreed to table moving forward with the Greeley St. Project engineering phase for the time being.

Nashua also passed an ordinance to vacate Madison St. on the easterly side of blocks 6 and 7. The second and third readings were foregone and moved to final passage.

The next meeting of the Nashua City Council is slated to take place on Monday, Aug. 15.

'Music Man' to be celebrated in butter at Iowa State Fair

There will be at least one of the 76 trombones in the butter cooler this year as butter sculptor Sarah Pratt works to celebrate the Iowa connections to The Music Man in 2022.

With its roots in fictional River City, Iowa, "The Music Man" centers around a traveling salesman selling instruments to more than Iowa Nice Midwesterners. The Broadway musical, written by Mason City-native Meredith Willson in 1957, celebrates its 60th year in film history in 2022 by rebooting on Broadway.

The Music Man scene will be joined by a relief celebrating the 100th Anniversary of the Ye Old Mill along with the iconic 600-pound butter cow.

The butter cow has been sculpted at the Iowa State Fair since 1911. Various companion sculptures and scenes have joined the butter cow since 1996.

The Nashua Public Library recently received state accreditation that will run through June 30, 2025.

Library gets coveted accreditation

The State Library of Iowa has announced that the Nashua Public Library has met the conditions for state accreditation as outlined in "In Service to Iowa: Public Library Standards Sixth Edition."

Achieving accreditation requires a significant, ongoing local commitment to high quality library services.

The Nashua Public Library has been recognized for its efforts in all areas of library operations including governance and funding, staffing, library collection, services, public relations, access, and facilities. The accreditation status began on July 1 and is valid through June 30, 2025.

The director and board of trustees of the Nashua Public Library and the city of Nashua are to be commended for this achievement and their commitment to excellence in public library services for their community," said State Librarian Michael Scott.

Of Iowa's 543 public libraries, 403 – including the Nashua Public Library – are accredited. Iowa's accredited public libraries are recognized for being responsive to their communities and for exhibiting excellence in their provision of library services.

More than two-thirds of all Iowans have active public library cards. Iowa libraries play key roles in workforce and economic development, lifelong learning and e-government activities. Iowans use their libraries to find jobs, do homework, locate a good book to read, research medical conditions, access government information, and more.

Accredited libraries receive a higher rate of compensation through the State Library's Enrich Iowa program.

They also receive a Certificate of Accreditation signed by Governor Kim Reynolds, Lieutenant Governor Adam Gregg, State Librarian Michael Scot, and Iowa Commission of Libraries Chairperson Carrie Falk.

Plainfield woman one of three to receive volunteer award

Three northern Iowa women, including one from Plainfield, received the Iowa Governor's Volunteer Award during an awards ceremony held recently in Cedar Falls.

Erin McCord of Northwood, Linda Siems of Nora Springs and Jennifer Schilling of Plainfield were honored by Gov. Kim Reynolds and Lt. Governor Adam Gregg with the award that is presented annually to individuals and organizations who go above and beyond in serving others. More than 500 awards were presented this year during five ceremonies across Iowa. It is estimated that more than 150 communities in Iowa were served by this year's honorees.

McCord, Siems, and Schilling were honored for their service as Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) volunteers. As CASAs, they advocate for children who have been abused and neglected. They provide a consistent presence for the children during an uncertain time, promote healthy family connections, and report to the juvenile judge about what is in the children's best interests.

North Iowa CASA Program Coordinator Crystal Engstrom stated that the program depends on caring, dedicated volunteers like McCord, Siems, and Schilling.

"These ladies are amazing advocates for the children they serve, and our program is so blessed to have them. I'm thrilled that they could be honored with this award, as they are very deserving."

According to Engstrom, the North Iowa CASA program is in need of more advocates. Volunteers must be at least 21 years old, have some flexibility in their schedules, pass background checks, and complete the advocate training program, which is available in person or virtually.

Ionia has plenty of entertainment on tap for Fun Days this weekend

Ionia Fun Days will kick off its two-day run on Friday, and the committee putting together the event have packed a lot into the schedule for what they're billing as "Aloha from Ionia: Where Life is a Little Cooler."

Friday night's slate includes Big Foot's BBQ food truck, the crowning of Little Mister and Little Miss Ionia at 7:30 p.m. and the music of Country Line Drive as the band will play on Main Street from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Saturday's events will be highlighted by the Fun Days 2-Way Parade that begins at 11 a.m. and will be led by Grand Marshals Louie and Linda Hugh.

There will be a number of kid's activities, including a tractor pull, inflatables and water games after the parade.

The event will come to a close Saturday night when a hypnotist will put on a show for kids at 6:30 p.m. before the band Redline rocks Main Street from 8:30 p.m. to midnight.

Historical group marks 30-year anniversary

Thirty years ago, the National 19th Amendment Society (NNAS) was formed through the vision of Rhoda McCartney of Charles City.

That vision? To purchase the childhood home of Carrie Lane Chapman Catt and over four acres of the land.

The plan? Restore Carrie's childhood home and preserve the legacy of her leadership in passing the 19th Amendment giving women the right to vote in 1920.

Rhoda knew her vision to restore the home, needed the leadership of a strong group.

Legally formed as a 501(c)3 organization, the original board members were Ron Schlick, Marilu Wohlers, Dave Ruble, Toni Noah, Jo Herbrechtsmeyer, MaryAnn Zanotti, Cathy Rottinghaus, Margaret Carroll and Candy Pelz.

On Aug. 20, 2022, the NNAS will continue to celebrate the vision of Rhoda McCartney, founder of the National 19th Amendment Society, the board who worked tirelessly to share the vision, raise money to complete the restoration and to promote the legacy of Carrie. Countless individuals continue today to devote their time and talent to make this museum an outstanding place in the community and nation.

Leaders and volunteers continue to be a forward moving force of commitment to educate and preserve the history of Carrie.

An Open House is held in August annually.

During the past 30 years, the two-story Victorian-style farmhouse has been successfully restored, opening to the public in 2005. It is complete with beautiful wall-mounted informational panels designed by design students from the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls.

In 2010, the Interpretive Center was completed. It houses additional facts about Carrie and the Lane family, plus an interactive touch table.

Today the Carrie Chapman Catt Girlhood Home, Museum & Interpretive Center is recognized as an important museum featuring Carrie's life, her renowned contribution to the passing of the 19th Amendment in 1920 and her work internationally.

Projects and programs have been developed through the years that engage visitors. Some of those include a natural prairie re-established, Prairie Day Camp Day for youth, Family Apple Picking & Cidermaking Days.

"Carrie's Lane", a brick memory path with the engraved names of donors.

The Brick Dedication is held annually.

The original vision 30 years ago has gone beyond expectations and today is recognized as a must-see historical museum.

NNAS continues to focus on educating visitors on the history of Carrie Lane Chapman Catt, a strong leader who worked tirelessly to secure the vote for women and worldwide achievements.

The society remains strong on the continued improvement of site facilities, partnering and promoting community and national events including the Centennial of Women's right to vote in 2020.

Those who want to discover the history can do so at Carrie's Girlhood Home, which remains the only museum west of the Mississippi River that is dedicated to telling the story of suffrage.

Docent-guided tours are available from Memorial Day through Labor Day, Mondays through Saturdays between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., Sundays noon to 4 p.m. and by appointment throughout the year.

For questions about the museum, please call 641-228-3336.

Floyd County voters may have the chance to call EMS service 'essential'

By BOB STEENSON

bsteenon@charlescitypress.com

A newly formed Floyd County Emergency Medical Services System Advisory Council has some significant work to do, and a short time in which to do it.

The advisory council must come up with an annual tax dollar figure that it thinks is sufficient to support ambulance service and other emergency medical services (EMS) activities in the county, decide for how many years a potential tax levy or levies should run, then make a recommendation to the Board of Supervisors.

It must do that in the next few weeks in order to give supervisors time to make a decision on the recommendation by the end of this month if the council and the board want the question to go before the voters on the Nov. 8 general election this year.

Several members of the advisory council questioned whether it was realistic to get all the numbers together that will be needed to make a recommendation to the supervisors in the time available.

Advisory council member Jeff Stirling, crew chief for the Greene Ambulance, said he was also on the Butler Council advisory council, and they were looking at a vote in the 2023 general election.

Advisory council member Brian Chambers, the chief for the Marble Rock Fire Department and Marble Rock First Responders, said there was a danger if there wasn't enough time to fully explain the proposed tax and its necessity to the voters that the measure could fail.

"If we push it too hard and miss, it will be hard to try again," Chambers said.

If a vote is held and it fails to meet a required 60% approval threshold, then according to the Iowa Code the essential services designation for EMS in the county that the Board of Supervisors approved at its Monday meeting would be void and the Board of Supervisors would have to start all over again.

In this case, it could be a brand new Board of Supervisors, as none of the current members is running for reelection and the entire board is open this year because of new supervisor districting.

Despite initial misgivings about the time available, the advisory council forged ahead at its initial meeting Tuesday evening, forming an action plan and a schedule with the purpose of coming up with a recommendation that would make a public vote possible this year.

Brandy Molitor, an advanced EMT with AMR ambulance and the founder of the Floyd County EMS Association, said many of the numbers are already known, and she had been gathering data for some time.

The board agreed it should come up with the total cost for 10 years to support the current AMR ambulance service, Nora Springs Volunteer Ambulance Service, Greene Volunteer Ambulance service within Floyd County, Marble Rock First Responders and Floyd County EMS Association, to cover the costs of staffing, training, equipment and capital costs.

The law allows the county to seek to collect an EMS tax for up to 15 years, but after a discussion it was decided by the advisory council that 15 years seemed too long, five years seemed too short, and the 10 years seemed about right.

Huskies survive a hot camp week

CAMPS: FROM 8

squad is practice, practice, practice. So essentially camp is the practice before the real practice begins officially in the state on Monday for fall sports.

Husky netters received individual instruction in three different workshops or sessions from Tuesday to Thursday of this week. All participants took part in camp on Monday from 3 to 5 p.m.

"We have a really young team this year. We have broken camp into positions this year so we can focus on each position to get good reps in. We have introduced different attacks to our younger players. Our main goal is to get good touches on the ball so we can set up our hitters to finish," said Foelske.

Foelske said she had around 25 players out in all grades for her camp.

"With the amount of young players we have, we are really focusing on bringing them to the next level of play. For some it is a big jump coming from junior high to high school in all aspects of the game, including expectations in practice," Foelske added.

Christensen – who last fall guided N-P to its first playoff appearance since 2014 – said his camp is similar to what it has been in prior years. The format and general schedule of what goes down at his camp stays mostly the same.

"We always focus on fundamentals and it's a great chance for the older kids to lead the younger kids through drills," said Christensen, who took over the program in 2020 after being an assistant at Charles City for eight seasons.

N-P – which went 4-5 last year in Class A – has 35 kids out on the varsity level according to Christensen. The Husky head coach said 25 kids are out for the middle school program.

Christensen hit on what's important to him and his coaching staff at these early-season get-togethers that can also help strengthen a team's bond.

"We really stress a great attitude, great effort, bring a great teammate and having fun," said Christensen, a 2005 South Tama High School grad.

Christensen is continuing to build a program at N-P and he said that means being a better player this year, than last. He also mentioned putting kids in a spot where they have to compete is also key to the Huskies' success.

Of course temps were in the 90s for a large portion of this week – which seems to coincide with the start to sports camps, at least in the state of Iowa.

Beating the heat and learning how to deal with a mercury that can reach a sizzling, triple-digit degree is sometimes just as important as any form tackle or blocking drill – at least early on in August.

"I think the biggest thing with heat is building tolerance. We have many water breaks and stress proper hydration and nutrition at home," said Christensen.

Fans were running at full speed inside the Husky Gymnasium during N-P's volleyball camp. That means no air conditioning.

"Our gym is always hot to start the season. We take more breaks when the gym was like it was on Wednesday. It probably helps with conditioning a bit, but our biggest issue is keeping the floors dry so we don't get anyone hurt before our season starts," said Foelske.

What would any camp be without some laughter and good times? That means taking a break from drills and creating some fun memories.

"I expect them to stay pretty focused during camp, but with how hot it is this week in the gym, sometimes you have to just have a little fun. We play a serving game. While they are working on their serve, the goal is actually to hit their teammates on the other side of the net," said

HUSKIES GO CAMPING!

NASHUA-PLAINFIELD FALL ATHLETES KICK OFF SEASONS WITH ANNUAL CAMPS

By KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

Camps are a summer tradition in America.

New flash – water's wet, the sky is blue, yada, yada, yada.

But whether it's religion-based (Bible camp), sports related (football, volleyball camp), for the musically-inclined (band camp) or even an out-of-this-world experience (space camp) – they all matter to someone and becoming better at what you're working towards is generally the main goal.

Of course, having fun is at the top of the list – for sure.

For Nashua-Plainfield coaches Andrew Christensen and Mindy Foelske – teaching the basics and understanding the framework to success is essential for their camp-goers.

Foelske ran two camps this week for her volleyball spikers – a Future Stars Camp for athletes entering grades K-8. The other camp is for her high school Huskies that look to improve on a 13-15 mark from a year ago.

"One of the things we stress the most right now is that they all have something to improve on and that they have to want to get better. This is a rebuilding year for us after losing three of our main players last year. We have three big spots to fill and we are going to have to work to create the kind of team chemistry we had last year," said Foelske.

The focus for Foelske and her Top of Iowa East Division
