City tax rate going up but won't be close to max levy

Nashua City Council holds quick, quiet public hearing; tax rate now is going up by just 1.2%

By BOB FENSKE
Of the Reporter

The city portion of Nashua residents' property tax bill will be going up next year, but here's the good news: The hike isn't going to be anywhere near what a legal notice published earlier this month showed.

"You publish high, but I think the council's goal all along was to find ways to make sure that wasn't the final rate," Nashua City Clerk John Ott said Thursday, a few days after the council held one of its shortest meetings. "You can always go down from the [max levy] but once that's published, you can't go up."

So in the March 7 Reporter, the city published its max-levy public hearing notice that included a 9.2 percent increase in its tax-levy rate and an 11.3 percent hike in its tax-asking.

But by this past Monday, when the council held that public hearing, the numbers were a little more — make that, a lot more — palatable.

Ott said the council is now considering a tax-levy rate increase from $16,33998 per $1,000 valuation for this year to $16,52887 per $1,000 valuation for the 2025-26 fiscal year. Under the current proposed levy rate, that means the city will take in $823,600 in property taxes during the fiscal year that begins July 1, up 3.1 percent from almost $799,000 the city will receive during this fiscal year.

Almost all of that increase will go to the city's debt service fund to help pay for recent repairs made to the dam.

In its max-levy notice, the council blamed the large increase on not only the dam but also the fact that the city needed to levy more for FICA, IPERS and other employee benefits. On Thursday, though, Ott said the city will use reserves to cover the benefit cuts in 2025-26.

NASHUA-PLAINFIELD FFA MARKS ACCOMPLISHMENTS AT ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET, PREPARES FOR STATE CONFERENCE

By BOB FENSKE

In some ways, the annual Nashua-Plainfield FFA annual meeting and banquet represents an ending. In other ways, though, chapter members are just getting started.

Still, there's a reason the banquet takes place in March. Make that reasons.

First, FFA members are exceedingly busy in April and May. Second ... well, let Nashua-Plainfield FFA Advisor Heidi Hull explain.

"The other reason is that then we're not taking farmers out of the field. If we had it later [in the school year], that might be a

N-P qualifies busload for National History Day state competition

Powerhouse program has 11 of its 12 projects advance from regional meet

By BOB FENSKE
Of the Reporter

Here's a quick summary of how Monday's National History Day regional competition went for Nashua-Plainfield: Different location; same success.

The Sullivan Regional may have moved to a new home at the University of Northern Iowa this year, but Nashua-Plainfield's powerhouse program didn't really skip a beat as 11 of the 12 projects advisor Suzy Turner's students entered earned top-three finishes and qualified for the state contest that will be held next month in Ames.

The N-P team still delivered the same high-level performance as it has in past years," Turner said. "I'm extremely proud of the great work the kids have done. The extra hours they put in after school and on weekends, as well as their commitment to continuous improvement, really shines through on contest day."

Six Nashua-Plainfield projects completed by 13 students — Paige Franzen, Cal Levi, Kadence Huck, Ava Kirk, Elexa O'Neill, Jackson Mehmen, Connor Sullivan, Braylynn Brase, Mykah Hall, Emilie O'Neill, Ellie Sudol, Elizabeth Kalvig and Cora Arias — claimed first place while Titus Cerwinski, Melissa Hampton, Warner Huck,

N-P students will go back to work on History Day projects

NHD: FROM 1

Alexis Folkerts and Braxton Johnson all contributed to runner-up projects. Lydia Chester, Cooper Mitchell, Ronan Bond and Mia Schmitt, meanwhile, advanced to state with a third-place finish.

"A staff member from the state historical society approached me after the contest," Turner said, "and stated that the judges were blown away by our students' projects, as well as the passion and knowledge they conveyed in their interviews. I think that says it all!"

National History Day competition begins with a regional competition, and the top-three projects in each division advance to the state competition. At state, the top-two projects move on to the national competition, which is held in June at the University of Maryland in suburban Washington, D.C.

Students in grades 9-12 compete in the senior division while middle school students compete in the junior division.

Turner's students began researching their projects in the fall and returned plenty of firepower, if you will, from 2024. Kirk and Elexa O'Neill claimed the senior national championship in the senior group website division last summer while Franzen, Kadence Huck and Levi advanced to their fourth consecutive national competition with its senior group documentary.

Three other NHD students — Jackson Mehmen, Emilie O'Neill and Schmitt — also returned after qualifying for the national competition a year ago.

But if there is a truism in NHD it is this: The project is never really done.

Students now have until April 14 to improve their projects and get them resubmitted. The state contest, which will be held on April 28, is moving this year from Des Moines to the campus of Iowa State.

And the goal, of course, is to earn that trip to D.C. this summer.

"Obviously, that is everyone's goal but it's a steep challenge to become a national qualifier," Turner said. "No matter the outcome, I love working with our kids."

EMS, Rescue Squad lose one of the 'really good guys'

Emergency responders appreciate outpouring of support after popular EMT passes away at the age of 41

By BOB FENSKA
Of the Reporter

It was the morning of Sunday, March 16, and Brock Schmidt sat at one of the desks in the office at the Chickasaw County EMS station.

His shift had ended 15 minutes earlier, but he was shooting the proverbial breeze with his boss, Joel Knutson, and sharing his EMS story with the reporter who was doing a "day-in-the-life" story on the service that provides ambulance service to the rural areas of the county as well as residents in six cities — New Hampton, Bassett, Fredericksburg, Ionia, Lawler and North Washington.

"I just wanted to help people," Schmidt said when asked how he found his way to EMS 10 years ago. "I wanted a job where I could make a difference. It's not always the easiest job — you see things you want to forget right away — but it's really rewarding."

On Saturday morning, Brock Schmidt passed away while on duty. The EMT and his crew partner, Sam Streeter, had returned from an inter-facility transfer from MercyOne New Hampton Medical Center to Mason City. They wrote their report and turned in.

Later that morning, he was found dead in the bedroom at the station. He was just 41 years old and leaves behind a wife, Marea, two daughters and four stepchildren.

It was, in short, a gut-wrenching day.

"We've all had really tough days in EMS. It goes with the territory," Knutson said Monday, "but Saturday was the worst day on, two days off."

The FLAG AT Chickasaw County EMS flew at half-staff Monday, and the service's logo by the front office door was covered with a black ribbon.

And two days after Schmidt's passing, the tone at the station was somber.

Employees of the service began gathering at the station soon after the news began spreading through the EMS ranks.

Two of the service's employees — Katie Gilmour and Garrett Raum — who are based with the ambulance in Fredericksburg came to New Hampton to handle any calls that came in while an ambulance from Cresco handled the call for an inter-facility transfer out of MercyOne New Hampton.

"The number of people who are supporting is freaking amazing," Knutson said, "and we know they're doing it for Marea and the family, too."

"It's what Brock would do for everyone else. He was not only an employee, but he was a really good friend not just to me but this whole community."

Schmidt, a graduate of Janesville High School, moved to New Hampton and quickly established himself as a community servant — volunteering for both the New Hampton Fire Department and the Chickasaw County Rescue Squad.

In 2015, he accepted a job offer from Chickasaw Ambulance Service owner Jeremy McGrath as a driver, and he eventually became an EMT.

"He was the guy who would give the shirt off his back for anyone," McGrath said Monday. "He was always happy, and I could ask anything of him, and he'd do it. We lost one of the good guys, one of the really, really good guys, and it's just heartbreaking."

When Chickasaw County EMS began service on Jan. 1, 2023, Schmidt was one of the "originals," and at the time of his death, he was one of the service's three full-time employees. He, along with Brannon Anderson and Carly Sedivey, worked one day on, two days off.

"They all have their focuses," Knutson said, "and Brock's was the station. He took a lot of pride in it. You never had to worry about him finding something to do; he was always ready to chip in. He always put a lot of care and thought on how we operate. He was very quick to say, 'Hey, let's try something different, or if I tried to implement something different, he jumped in and helped."

AS HIS FELLOW Chickasaw County EMS employees, along with those from the Rescue Squad and law enforcement, gathered at the station this past weekend, they remembered a good man gone too soon.

They told "Brock stories" and through the tears and heartache, they shared a few laughs.

"We were going to Cedar Rapids one day, and I told Brock we didn't have to run old ladies off the road," Knutson said, recalling one of his favorites, "but we needed to get there fast, too. So we're going through Cedar Rapids and I see a car pass us. Never got old giving him crap that he was driving emergent and got passed. He'd look at me with that Brock aw-shucks look and swore he was going 15, 20 over."

On Monday night, a Decorah-based team was joined by another group from the Iowa State Patrol to hold what is called a "Critical Incident Stress Debriefing," something that usually happens after a particularly horrific incident.

"It's usually something you do after a bad accident, bad fire, something like that," Knutson said a few hours before the debriefing, "but I've been doing this for a lot of years and this is the first time I'm going to be a part of one for a fellow employee."

The EMS director paused and gathered his thoughts.

"We need it. ... We're a family because of the [crap] we go through, and his family became our family. ... That's what makes it so hard."

ASK ANYONE WHO knew Schmidt and they will tell you that as devoted as he was to EMS, the Rescue Squad and, back in the day, the New Hampton Fire Department, they all paled in comparison to his family, so, too, did the guns and hunting he loved.

"The utmost part of his life was his family," McGrath said. "I don't know anyone who was as dedicated as Brock was when it came to work, but Marea, the kids, they were always at the top of his list. That was the inspiring part of Brock. He had his priorities set the way you're supposed to have them."

He was, his fellow employees will tell you, a damn good EMT, even if from time to time, they had to cajole him to get his reports written.

When it came to providing aid and comfort, though, Schmidt was top notch.

He was a big cowboy, one with a soft heart and a non-existent temper.

"I've seen him perturbed, I've seen him frustrated when things didn't go right," Knutson said, "but I never saw him get mad."

That's a pretty good trait in EMS.

"It is," Knutson said. "I know a lot of people say that this guy was the nicest guy in the world, never got mad. It's cliché, but with Brock, it's true. ... All of us here ..."

His voice trailed off as the emotions got the best of Knutson. It's OK, he didn't need to say it.

Brock Schmidt will be missed.

Supervisors hint that Chickasaw County RSB, GS tax-levy rates may inch down a bit

During a much 'quieter' public hearing on county's max levy, residents tell county leaders that they believe they should look at selling at least one county-owned building

BY BOB FENSKA
Of the Reporter

It wasn't anything like last year when it came to the Chickasaw County Board of Supervisors' public hearing on its max tax levy.

Monday's hearing, in short, paled in comparison to the one held on March 27, 2024.

Instead of holding it in the courtroom, it was held in the cozy confines of the board room. Instead of an almost two-hour hearing, Monday's lasted all of 17 minutes.

Not that supervisors didn't get a few comments, but the difference between requesting an almost 19 percent increase in tax-asking and calling for a 3 percent increase was plainly evident Monday morning.

About 10 county residents attended Monday's hearing that dealt with the maximum tax-levy rates county leaders are considering for the budget year that begins on July 1, and three residents actually had more questions about school taxes than county ones.

"A lot of people think that when they write that check to the Chickasaw County treasurer, that we control that those values, those tax-askings," Board Chairman Jake Hackman said. "We don't."

In a later meeting — under state law, the only item that can be on the max-levy meeting agenda is the public hearing — supervisors hinted that at least two of the levies they control, Rural Services Basic (RSB) and General Supplemental (GS) could inch down by the time the board certified its budget and tax levy next month.

The issue, though, remains General Basic (GB), which state law requires to have a maximum levy rate of $3.50 per $1,000 valuation.

One county resident, Mike Murray, expressed frustration about the six positions that we will be cut from the county.

"My main concern is the cut of employees [because] of the shortage of money in the county," Murray said. "You have to get that money from somewhere, I think, to keep those employees going. Can you find anyplace to get it?"

Hackman's answer was an emphatic no.

"The levy rates are maxed out. Our tax base is not growing," he said. "It does not help the shortfall, especially when people signed up for exemptions of military and 65-plus. That's less revenue coming in on property tax. . . ."

"We either have to grow the tax base or cut the amount of service that this county is used to."

Two county residents — Robert Shatek and Dixie Zeien — also called on the county to sell the old Hugeback-Johnson funeral home building that is now home to the County Attorney's Office and Emergency Management Agency and utilize more of the Heritage Center.

"There's quite a bit of space at the county home, I think that's quite the expense to operate both buildings," Shatek said.

"Those are two buildings and there is not much activity going on in either one," Zeien added a few minutes later. "Can they be consolidated?"

During its regular weekly board meeting, which started 13 minutes after the public hearing ended, Hackman went through what he hoped will be the timeline for the remainder of the "budget season."

The board chairman said he hopes the board this Monday will approve setting the public hearing for the 2025-26 budget for April 14, which will give the county enough time to publish the legal notice in its two official newspapers next week.

He also said he felt that the GS levy rate could come down slightly and expressed the same opinion about RSB.

During the more-than-one-month-long budgeting process, the county has cut more than $1 million from proposed budgets to help alleviate a relatively large gap between projected revenues and expenditures in GB.

During that process, six positions — three at Public Health and Homecare Services and one each from the Treasurer's, Auditor's and Sheriff's Office — were eliminated. That means the county won't be paying its share of six health insurance policy premiums, IPERS and other benefits that are covered by GS.

Hackman also pointed out that the projected RSB budget has a 25 percent ending fund balance and that includes a portion of the county's two payments for Chickasaw County EMS.

"We set our max levy rates. We can go down," Supervisor Steve Breitbach said. "I'd be willing to look at it next week

Supervisors in February reached a consensus to raise the RSB levy rate by three cents, from $3.52 to $3.55 per $1,000 valuation, but Hackman argued that the county doesn't need the increase levy rate that is paid by rural property owners.

"We set our max levy rates. We can go down," Supervisor Steve Breitbach said. "I'd be willing to look at it next week when we get more numbers. I think we can drop RSB and GS some, but let's make sure."

Board members took no action on the budget but agreed to try to get the public hearing set on Monday.

Still, as Hackman pointed out, it's been a challenging budget year, and he talked about what he and Supervisor Travis Suckow heard at a recent Chickasaw County Farm Bureau meeting.

"I still heard don't raise property tax, but don't cut the service that they use or we use or that I use," he said, "but that's hard to do when you're sitting in these chairs because every service is needed by somebody, right? That's what makes this tough when our max levy has been maxed out for years."

N-P coach lauds senior's leadership

GIRLS TRACK: FROM 8

clocking out at 2:15.46 to win the event. Second-place Brogan Evans of Mason City was far back off the senior Husky's pace with a 2:28.77.

Huck just fell under – by a minuscule four one-hundredths of a second – the required 800 time of 2:15.5 or what is called a Blue Standard and was able to automatically qualify for Drake.

Huck cracked the Drake Relays field in the mile run as well at the Wartburg Indoor No. 1 meet with a time of 4:42.64.

"She is on a mission this season and is beyond determined. This is the first season that Kadence has knocked out a Blue Standard indoors and for her to knock out two is so exciting," said N-P head coach Amber McCall.

Huck, who will run at Oklahoma State later this fall, is no stranger to Drake.

Huck just missed out on qualifying for Drake in the mile run last spring. She placed third in the open 400 last year at Drake and was also third in the 800 run. Huck medaled in the 400 dash (fourth), 800 run (fifth) and 1,500 run (fifth) at Drake as well when she was a sophomore in 2023.

McCall talked about Huck's desire to be the best out on the oval – which centers around fine-tuning her immense talent and year-round training.

"It is a true statement of the hard work she has put in all year round, every single day. Kadence knows what it takes to be one of the best athletes in the state. She is very committed and that is what it takes. We're very, very proud of her and so excited to see what is to come!" said McCall.

Several other Huskies are laying down a foundation of success that should be fun to watch this season as well in freshmen Kelly Cerwinski and Eva Foelske. Both those ninth-graders ran in the 4x200 along with senior Marleigh Lowe (leadoff leg) and Huck, who anchored the eighth-place relay in a time of 1:55.87.

Cerwinski also has plenty of room for improvement, as does Foelske, in the long jump. Cerwinski leaped 13-9, good for 17th place. Foelske jumped 12-5 and finished 32nd.

"I am excited to see what our group of freshmen can add to our team this season. Kelly had a really great night at Wartburg. She jumped 13-9 with having the whole board left to use," said the N-P head coach. "Eva had the whole board left also, so just like Kelly, I am excited to see what her long jump can be at once we get those steps down."

Lowe, a senior, finished 28th in the 55 hurdle prelims with a time of 10.66.

"Marleigh has been a huge leader for us. She has taken the younger hurdlers under her wings and has helped them tremendously," said McCall.

N-P junior Eden Lamborn, a state qualifier in the shot put last year, placed 12th in the event with a toss of 30-7.75.

N-P sophomore Rachel Paplow, freshman Emma Hinders, junior Jade Maia-Gicquel and sophomore Manuela Jimenez ran to a 19th-place clip of 4:55.14.

"This season we have to foreign exchange students: Manuela and Jade. They are so willing to try whatever crazy we throw at them with most of it being new to them. They are rocking it and I couldn't be more proud of them and their willingness!" said McCall.

The Huskies open the outdoor season at the St. Ansgar co-ed meet this coming Tuesday.

"I am ready to get outside and put a full lineup together to see where we are currently sitting at this point of our season. We will be strong within field events and filling every event (as long as we stay healthy)," the N-P head coach said.

Husky seniors run well in distance race

BOYS TRACK: FROM 8

The dilemma he'll be faced with is which ones – meaning who goes where?

That's a "problem" that many coaches would love to have.

"We've always kind of focused on relays with him, but it may be something this year where we need to look more at some individuals to see if we can have some team success, but also some individual success as well," Sudol added about Hansen and his other athletes.

Two of Sudol's seniors – long-distance runners Caleb Sinnwell and Luke Paplow – are shining bright on the big stage in their final season out on the oval.

Paplow ran a career PR in the mile run (1,600) this past Tuesday in a time of 5:18.55 (14th-place). His previous career best was 5:38.59. Sinnwell was 18th overall in the 1,600 in 5:32.86, almost 13 seconds better than his prior lifetime best of 5:45.54.

"I thought that was probably his best he had every run in the mile," said Sudol about Paplow's eight laps around the 200-meter indoor track. "His consistent speed that he had the whole time and the effort he was putting in – the kid was pushing him pretty hard. Luke battled the whole race and really ran a phenomenal race. He had a lot of fight in him. Now it's just continuing to improve that time and set some goals and see what he can do."

N-P's 4x400 relay finished eighth in 3:49.97 with the team of junior Landon Foelske, Hansen, junior Jake Smith and freshman anchor Zeke Kalainoff.

those gold nuggets.

"That kid's got some talent there that we're going to look to hopefully use and bring his times down," said Sudol.

The Huskies' 4x800 relay of freshman Andrew Schmitt, along with juniors Brexton Bird, Braeden Mitchell and Avery Mueller crossed the finish line in 9:32.88. That put them in 10th place.

Sudol was happy to see Zimmer and Blanchard perform well in the 55-meter hurdles. Zimmer – who DQ'd in the event at the first Wartburg Indoor earlier this month – placed 12th in 9.03 and Blanchard was 13th in 9.13.

"Both of them ran really well and neither one of them really likes highs," said Sudol. "Them being the guys that do golf and track, I told them every chance I get I gotta have you doing hurdles. They both ran clean races."

Women Marketing Cattle course in Decorah starts April 8

The Farm Management Team at Iowa State University Extension and Outreach is offering three Women Marketing Cattle courses this spring. One of those will be held in Decorah on April 8. Women Marketing Cattle begins at 5 p.m. with a light meal at the Winneshiek County Extension office. The course starts at 5:30 p.m. and concludes by 8:30 p.m., each Tuesday night for three weeks. The lead instructor is Joseph Lensing. The registration fee is $25.00.

This women-centered program offers an opportunity to meet area cattle producers and learn with others in a comfortable setting. A team of instructors will provide different perspectives.

This course is about capturing more value from beef production by understanding the true costs of production and developing an overall marketing strategy. Instructors will compare and contrast different market channels and pricing strategies. Sales at weaning, backgrounding, and finishing will be discussed. A refresher on carcass value and its relationship to price will be included.

Producers will learn how they can utilize futures prices to help them manage price risk and develop a marketing plan. They will learn more about livestock risk insurance plans, diversification, and other risk management tools. Producers will gain new insights and access tools to help them analyze and understand profitability.

The course includes an interactive market simulation activity. Class members will work together in small groups to practice new skills and try out a marketing strategy.

"We will take producers through a marketing year simulation where they will make key decisions and discover how those impact their profitability," stated Joseph Lensing, Farm Management Specialist.

Registration for the courses includes meals and course materials. Registration scholarships are available by writing to Madeline Schultz at schultz@iastate.edu.

More information about this and other programs for women can be found at the ISU Extension and Outreach Farm Management Team Women in Ag Program at www.extension.iastate.edu/womeninag.

FFA: FROM 1

problem," she said. "Yes and no, it's an 'ending,' but this is the perfect time to have it."

So as the chapter members, their families and faithful supporters gathered in the high school gymnasium Saturday evening, they had plenty to celebrate, all the while knowing there was still plenty to do.

They marked another exceptionally successful year for Nashua-Plainfield FFA, which, with its 50 members, is the largest student organization at the school. And Hull and her students also knew they had plenty to look forward to in the coming months.

There's the State Leadership Conference in Ames in just a couple of weeks. There are the host of upcoming competitions. There are the four county fairs — Chickasaw, Bremer, Butler and Floyd — that have Nashua-Plainfield FFA members in various shows. And, of course, there is the Iowa State Fair that takes place in August in Des Moines.

In other words, FFA is a year-round deal.

Hull is understandably proud of Nashua-Plainfield's chapter, one that in recent years has produced two North Central FFA District officers — Lukas Bucknell and current District President Caleb Lentz, a Nashua-Plainfield graduate who now attends Des Moines Area Community College.

On Saturday, the chapter honored its eight seniors — Nic Brase, Bailey Bond, Zach Hauser, Cale Jensen, Marleigh Lowe, Easton Richards, Jayden Rinken and Luke Paplow — with the "hanger ceremony," one that symbolizes it's time to hand up their blue corduroy coats as their FFA careers, at least when it comes to high school, comes to an end.

The chapter also handed out awards, recognitions and chapter degrees, and the Blue & Gold Award.

Hull said while every year is different, she found this year's FFA members to be "fairly self-motivating and willing to put the work in" to make Nashua-Plainfield's FFA chapter one of the best in the state.

When the banquet came to a conclusion on Saturday evening, though, chapter members had plenty to look forward to in the coming weeks. During the North Central District Convention, Cale Jensen earned a gold rating and advanced to the state competition in the job interview division while Elayna O'Neill and Alison Mehmen did the same with their "reporter's scrapbook."

Jensen also is one of four state finalists in the Iowa FFA Stars Over Iowa Award Program in the area of agricultural production, and the state's overall winner will be announced at the State Leadership Conference that is set for April 14-15.

The conference also includes the start of a number of other competitions for Nashua-Plainfield students.

But for an evening, at least, the banquet represented a chance to relax and celebrate.

"We have a lot of students who put a lot of time into FFA," Hull said, "and I do love seeing them grow throughout their years in it."

Huck wraps up Drake qualification in the 800; Husky coach says she's ready to take her girls team outdoors

BY KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

Kadence Huck is not messing around.

The Nashua-Plainfield star track and field athlete has wasted little time in positioning herself for yet another medal at the prestigious Drake Relays next month.

Never before had Huck – bearer of eight state titles won in Class 1A – hit a Drake Relays Blue Standard indoors. Until this year.

Huck will look to put a cap on a brilliant career at N-P – where she holds every school record in her marquee events – when the state meet kicks off in mid-May. But before that happens, all four high school classes in the state of Iowa will converge on the famed blue oval down in Des Moines in late April for the 115th running of the Drake Relays. The celebrated event that has played host to historic world-class athletes such as Carl Lewis, Jesse Owens and Wilma Rudolph is one of the top track and field events in the United States and brings together professional, collegiate and prep standouts together on one track.

Huck made it two-for-two in qualifying for the 800 and mile runs at Drake in each of the Huskies' two meets thus far at the Wartburg Indoor on March 10 and just last Tuesday in Waverly on the campus of Wartburg College. Earlier this week Huck blistered the field in the open 800 by

Horde of Huskies is ready to head outdoors next week

Nashua-Plainfield boys put finishing touches on indoor season with solid effort at Wartburg

BY KELLY TERPSTRA
Of the Reporter

The numbers just keep going up for Chase Sudol and his Nashua-Plainfield Huskies.

At this rate, comfortable seating arrangements might be at a premium when the N-P boys track team travels to St. Ansgar this coming Tuesday for its outdoor season opener.

That means the yellow school bus that drives the Huskies to each and every meet this spring should be packed.

Plan on it.

Sudol said he now has 46 kids out for the Class 1A squad after three more athletes decided to give track and field a go in 2025.

For the uninformed as far as how school size and enrollment numbers matter on the prep level – any roster pushing 50 for a small-school class track team in the state of Iowa is a lot.

"We had a few come on late," said Sudol. "It's been good. It's contagious when you got guys that are out and other kids want to come."

Sudol's horde of Huskies put a wrap on the indoor season with their second showing at the Wartburg Indoor this month on Tuesday. But really what those indoor meets do is set the stage for running under a clear blue sky and bright sunshine – obviously predicated on Mother Nature cooperating when the calendar flips over to April next week.

That means almost all of Sudol's runners, jumpers and throwers will be at his disposal when Tuesday rolls around – barring any unforeseen injury or illness. The sheer number of kids suiting up that will put on a Husky uniform is an indicator that with that much depth on his roster – Sudol has an opportunity to mine several diamonds in the rough or shiny gold nuggets.

It's time to start digging.

"When we got 46 guys out, I think you're bound to have some talent," said Sudol. "You get them in a variety that they're able to do, we're going to be able to put together a pretty good outdoor lineup."

N-P may sport a long contingent of athletes, but the Huskies only sport four seniors – Ty Berger, Luke Paplow, Caleb Sinnwell and Cal Levi. With that said, four of Sudol's tracksters will pull double duty in Levi, Berger and juniors Devon Blanchard and Tyler Zimmer, who also play golf.

Needless to say, this should be an exciting season for all involved with the Huskies out on the oval.

"We're young, but these kids work. I love it," said Sudol. "I think we're going to be a surprise team that people aren't necessarily predict to be what we are."

One star for N-P that has already been "unearthed" is junior Jase Hansen, who almost came up with a career PR in the open 400 at Wartburg. Hansen clipped out to a 55.46 – just three one-hundredths of a second off his career-best of 55.43. That encouraging time saw him cross the tape in the 11th spot.

"Jase works extremely hard. That kid can accomplish anything. I expect him to get better and better. It's just a matter of what we want to put him in," said Sudol.

Sudol has the luxury and option – not only with Hansen – to run numerous standout athletes in a vast array of events.

IHSAA to move boys state basketball tournament to Ames in 2027

To the Reporter

A century after playing championships inside State Gym, the Iowa High School Athletic Association (IHSAA) and Iowa State University (ISU) will enter a new era together in 2027, when the state boys basketball tournament will move to James H. Hilton Coliseum.

An initial five-year agreement with support from Discover Ames will place the five-day, 32-team boys' tournament inside Hilton Coliseum as the first-of-its-kind multi-use CyTown district is developed at the Iowa State Center and slated to come online in 2027.

"We couldn't be more excited about what this opportunity will offer our student-athletes, schools, and supporters as they experience an elite basketball environment at Hilton and an awesome new tournament community in CyTown and Ames," IHSAA executive director Tom Keating said. "Our sincere appreciation goes to everyone who has helped make this possible at Iowa State University, Discover Ames and Cyclone Athletics."

Lauded as one of the nation's finest college basketball venues, Hilton Coliseum boasts consistently strong attendance for the Cyclones' men's and women's basketball programs with a capacity of 14,267, and the programs annually rank among the national leaders in home attendance.

ISU will make facilities at Hilton and the attached and updated Scheman Building available for the IHSAA event.

Opened in 1971, ISU Athletics installed a new state-of-the-art video board, LED ribbon boards and an audio system ahead of the 2024-25 season, and has also completed upgrades to its team locker rooms within the facility.

The Scheman Building is in the midst of a significant renovation which has created new hospitality spaces for Cyclone contests as well as other special events that the facility attracts.

The surrounding CyTown district – announced in 2022 and expected to be up and running in 2027 – will feature space for retail, food and beverage, common areas, and a 200-room Marriott hotel, The Cardinal.

"On behalf of Iowa State University, thank you to the IHSAA board, Tom Keating, and Tom's staff for deciding to bring the Athletic Association's state basketball tournament to Ames to experience Hilton Magic," Iowa State Director of Athletics Jamie Pollard said. "We are excited to host this great event and our staff looks forward to working with the IHSAA to make this special for the athletes, coaches and fans whose teams reach the state tournament each year."

"This is a major win for Iowa State University and our communities' hotels and restaurants," he added.

"It is a great example of the new economic opportunities that CyTown can bring to the Ames community. This will be the first of many such opportunities our community will have in future years."

PBS to broadcast three IHSAA tourneys

For the first time ever, three Iowa High School Athletic Association (IHSAA) championships in football, wrestling, and basketball are coming to Iowa PBS.

The state's public broadcasting network will produce and broadcast finals from the three most-watched boys' high school sports starting in fall 2025-26.

Through a multi-year initial agreement, each of the selected championship events will appear on statewide Iowa PBS and stream for free through both Iowa PBS and IHSAA.

"The stories of Iowa student-athletes, teams, coaches, and communities are at the center of our Iowa PBS Sports coverage," said Andrew Batt, executive director and general manager at Iowa PBS. "We are excited to extend our award-winning, in-depth broadcasts to the IHSAA and mutually ensure statewide access of these games across all 99 counties of Iowa and beyond. Every Iowan deserves an opportunity to witness these athletes pursue a championship on our state's most extensive broadcast and streaming network."

Iowa PBS's live broadcast and streaming of IHSAA championship sports will be in addition to the statewide network's existing coverage of Iowa Girls High School Athletic Union championships for various sports.

While IHSAA's wrestling championships have history with Iowa PBS, football and basketball will be making modern era debuts in 2025-26.

Wrestling's most recent public media broadcast came in 2002, while football finals made two recorded appearances in 1984 and 1985.
