FCMC wins cancer center suit

Judge rules for Charles City hospital in legal battle over late Nashua man’s bequest

By BOB STEENSON

bsteenson@charlescitypress.com

A Chickasaw County judge has ruled that Floyd County Medical Center will receive about $10 million from the estate of Herman Stille, clearing the way for the hospital to move forward with plans for a cancer treatment center.

The decision ends more than three years of legal wrangling over the Nashua farmer’s will, which had placed conditions on the gift and included the Mayo Clinic as a contingent beneficiary.

In a 16-page ruling issued Thursday evening, District Court Judge Richard Stochl concluded that FCMC met the will’s primary requirement: that the hospital remain independent.

“The bequest of the residual assets of the estate shall be payable to FCMC to build and operate a cancer center,” Stochl wrote. He added that Mayo’s objections amounted to criticisms of the hospital’s plans rather than legal grounds to overturn the gift.

“FCMC is absolutely over the moon with this decision,” said Dawnett Willis, FCMC’s chief executive officer in a statement Friday.

She thanked the court for “honoring what we wholeheartedly believe was the vision of Mr. Stille for a cancer center here in Floyd County. We will steward these precious funds with

ENDING IT ON ANOTHER HIGH NOTE

NASHUA-PLAINFIELD HAS NATIONAL RUNNER-UP AND FINALIST AT FINAL NATIONAL HISTORY DAY COMPETITION FOR ADVISOR

By BOB FENSKE

Of the Reporter

Let’s put it this way, the students of Nashua-Plainfield gave their National History Day a pretty dang nice sendoff.

There was a national competition runner-up finish produced by five students, there was a top-10 finish from another student and, maybe most importantly, there was the way the 14 students represented their school and their communities at the contest that is held annually on the University of Maryland campus in suburban Washington, D.C.

“All of them, they were just outstanding,” said Turner on Thursday as she and her students waited to catch a plane back to Iowa. “They worked hard, they were well behaved, they were a joy to be around this week.”

And after Thursday morning’s awards ceremony was completed,

Nashua-Plainfield was bringing home some hardware, too.

The junior group website by Braylynn Brase, Mykah Hall, Elizabeth Kalvig, Ellie Sudol, Emile O’Neill titled “Don’t Tinker with My Rights: The Case for School Responsibility and Student First Amendment Rights” gave Nashua-Plainfield its seventh National History Day top-three finish since 2018 with that runner-up finish.

Jackson Mehmen’s individual website titled “The Iowa Cow War: Moo’ving the Needle of Justice to Balance Farmers’ Rights and Public Health Responsibilities” was a top-10 finalist and earned the competition’s Agricultural History Special Award.

The reality, though, is that Turner was proud of each and every one of the school-record 14 national qualifiers, who also included Ava Kirk, Elena O’Neill, Cal Levi, Kadence

Sheriff will buy tasers even without board’s OK

County attorney: State code gives Shawver authority to spend funds even without ‘acknowledgment’

By BOB FENSKE

editor@nhtrib.com

Chickasaw County Sheriff Ryan Shawver said Monday afternoon he plans to proceed with purchasing new tasers for his department even after the Board of Supervisors voted against “acknowledging” the purchase during its meeting earlier in the day.

And Shawver received backing from County Attorney David Laudner, who said that the county’s purchase policy — one in which elected officials and department heads must have purchases of $10,000 or more acknowledged by supervisors — isn’t backed up by Iowa Code.

Shawver told supervisors that the tasers deputies use were purchased in 2019 and weren’t the so-called “latest models” when they were purchased. He said that his office recently had trouble with one of its tasers and that Axon, the only company in the country that provides tasers to law-enforcement agencies, said it couldn’t be fixed.

That’s when he decided that his current year’s budget was healthy enough to pay a $40,000 up-front fee for a five-year contract that would provide his office with new tasers, replacement cartridges and replacements if they were needed.

“My budget supports it with also keeping true with what I thought I’d be able to give back — a $100,000 — and I think it’s going to be more than

Much-needed rain falls on area fields

By BOB FENSKE

editor@nhtrib.com

That, folks, is what we call a timely rain.

After receiving just 0.88 inches of rain over a 20-day period, much of the Nashua area received around 2 inches of rain from storms that moved through the area Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning.

The rainfall helped alleviate some of the growing concerns that a full-fledged drought might be developing and came as welcome news to area farmers.

Nashua’s recording station, which is located at the Northeast Iowa Demonstration Farm located just west of the city received 2.1 inches of rain from the storm while Charles City received 2.3 inches and New Hampton had 1.9 inches.

According to the U.S. Drought Monitor’s

Area lawmaker lashes out after governor vetoes eminent domain bill

By BOB STEENSON

bsteenson@charlescitypress.com

Gov. Kim Reynolds on Wednesday vetoed a bill that would have placed new limits on the use of eminent domain for projects like the proposed Summit Carbon Solutions pipeline that would cut across Chickasaw and Floyd counties, including through the Avenue of the Saints Development Park in Charles City.

Reynolds’ veto of House File 639 drew immediate reactions from both sides of the highly charged issue, which has sparked legal and political battles statewide over the past three years.

Supporters of the legislation argued it is needed to protect

Reynolds

Iowa landowners from having private property taken for a project they say primarily benefits private investors.

Opponents warned the measure could cripple future infrastructure projects critical to agriculture, ethanol and energy production.

Rep. Charley Thomson, R-Charles City, who had written the bill, issued a statement saying the governor’s actions put her “solidly on board” with “a ruthless cabal of politicians intent on a reckless, unsafe, and illegal pipeline project.”

“In the governor’s view, constitutional rights, such as eminent domain protections, should not be allowed to interfere with schemes to make money, especially if those schemes are being promoted by her friends, supporters, and contributors,” Thomson said.

In her veto message, Reynolds said that while she respects both sides of the debate, House File 639 “isn’t just about eminent domain.”

“It goes much further — and in doing so, sets a troubling precedent that threatens Iowa’s energy reliability, Nashua-Plainfield seniors Kadence Huck, Cal Levi and Paige Franzen meet with the judges during their fifth trip to the National History Day national competition.

Retiring advisor wants to stay involved with NHD

NHD: FROM 1

Huck, Paige Franzen, Lexy Folkerts, Warner Huck and Titus Cerwinske.

“It’s always hard because our kids have such high expectations of themselves, so the emotions run the gamut,” she said. “You have kids who are obviously celebrating and you have some who are disappointed. But I’m proud of all of them. They did a great job this year.”

It marked the final National History Day competition, at least as an advisor, for Turner, who is heading off to retirement.

She first learned of the program when she spent a year working for an area education agency, where she was in charge of putting together a National History Day contest, and she has led Nashua-Plainfield’s powerhouse program for the past 20 years.

Turner, though, was quick to pass out the credit, especially to fellow Nashua-Plainfield teacher Brian Rupp, whose seventh-grade students as part of this class, create a NHD project each year.

“He helps get the kids excited about the program, about their projects,” Turner said.

The national runner-up group website team included two of Rupp’s students — Hall and Brase — this past school year while O’Neill, Sudol and Kalvig were eighth-graders.

That team was actually a “merger,” if you will as both the seventh-graders and the eighth-graders wanted to work on projects centering around five Des Moines Community Schools students fight for their First Amendment rights during the 1960s.

“I told them we can’t have two Tinker projects,” Turner said, “and they came together and did a really nice job.”

And that project changed considerably from the one the students presented at the district contest in March and the one they presented at the state contest in early May.

“I think one of the things our students have always been great about is that they keep working on their projects,” she said. “It’s not quote, done, quote when they go to the first competition. They’re always trying to improve their projects. They’re always trying to go that extra mile.”

The national contest also marked the fifth straight year that the senior trio of Franzen, Huck and Levi have collaborated on a project that made it to the pinnacle of NHD.

Franzen and Levi have been part of NHD for seven years while Huck joined them as a seventh-grader.

“I’m so happy that they could end at nationals,” she said. “They’ve been such a huge part of NHD and I know it’s time for them to go on to bigger and better things, as they say, but yeah, it’s still a little sad to see them go.”

If there’s a rule when it comes to Nashua-Plainfield competing at National History Day competitions, it is that they will look professional. And Elena O’Neill, Ava Kirk (above) Titus Cerwinske, Jackson Mehmen (below left) and the youngest of the NHD qualifiers, sixth-graders Warner Huck and Lexy Folkerts (below right) certainly lived up to that rule during this week’s competition.

Ditto for Turner, although she said she plans on staying active in some capacity — possibly a judge — with National History Day.

“I’m going to miss the relationships with the kids because that really has been a joy for me,” she said, “but I want to be involved somehow with National History Day because I think it’s a great program that brings out the best in students and teachers. Even as a teacher in the classroom, I can tell you NHD impacted me, made me a better teacher. And to be able to do it in a school district and in communities that have supported it so well, that’s even better.”

Area Agency on Iowa is offering free services for those dealing with dementia issues

Northeast Iowa Area Agency on Aging (NEI3A) officials recently announced the launch of Dementia Friendly Iowa’s Dementia Service Specialist (DSS) Consultations, a free service for individuals and families navigating dementia.

“At NEI3A, we recognize how overwhelming dementia can be for both individuals and families,” said a press release for the organization. “Our new DSS Consultations are designed to provide personalized support, guidance, and resources to those navigating dementia.”

Each consultation is led by a trained Dementia Service Specialist who will:

- Assess the current situation, including symptoms and stage of dementia
- Help develop a clear care plan
- Provide vital education on dementia progression, safety strategies, and communication tips
- Offer tools and techniques to support caregivers
- Connect families with local resources such as support groups

- Facilitate a unique dementia simulation experience to help caregiver better understand dementia

Every session concludes with a customized roadmap and trusted referrals, ensuring participants leave feeling informed, supported, and empowered.

The contact for DSS Consultations is Erick Hill, Dementia Service Specialist, who may be reached at 319-287-1163 or ehill@nei3a.org.

CCADS sets Oct. 17 as due date for Business Plan Competition

To the Reporter

The Charles City Area Development Corporation [CCADC] Board of Directors announces its 2025 Business Plan Competition, with submission due date of Oct. 17.

“We celebrate entrepreneurship and innovation and are soliciting business plans in encouraging entrepreneurs, whether they have business ideas, start-ups or early-stage ventures” stated Tim Fox, CCADC Chief Executive Officer.

Eligible applicants will be residents of Floyd County and Nashua seeking to start a business or enter a new phase in an existing business.

CCADC President Scott Melliore noted that “we seek to be inclusive of all types of business starts and will provide more assistance than a mere business plan review. CCADC staff and Directors are available to work with applicants in devising the Business Plan, including critical review.”

In addition, CCADC works with local professionals to provide in-kind services for entrepreneurs relating to the professional’s area of expertise.

Your initial step should be in contacting Tim Fox at the CCADC office at 401 North Main Street, Charles City, Iowa telephone 641.228.3020 x13 or email tfox@charlescityia.com. He will give you the list of required Business Plan components as well as mutually formulate an action plan.

“We seek to nurture a new or early-stage business from the ground up,” said Melliore. Applicants will have the opportunity to set progress milestones with CCADC staff to ensure the best possible product by the 17 October deadline. The superior business plan submission will garner the $3,000 cash prize.

Beyond the business plan process entrepreneurs can avail themselves of professional expertise from the community as they implement actions depicted in the business plan. These typically include access to capital, marketing, and identification of legal structure, operations plan and financial planning.

Forecaster say more rain may be in offing for area

RAIN: FROM 1

Its May 27 report showed that 83 percent of area top soil and 81 percent of subsoil had adequate or surplus moisture, and the report released on Monday showed that those percentages had dropped to 63 percent for topsoil and 66 percent for subsoil.

The below-normal rainfall in recent weeks could be seen in Monday’s Iowa Crop and Condition Report that is put out weekly by the USDA’s National Agricultural Statistics Service.

And there’s good news in the short-term forecast put out by the National Weather Service that has chances of showers and thunderstorms every day through at least Wednesday.

the utmost care and look forward to bringing these vital healthcare services to our community.”

Stille, a lifelong bachelor from rural Nashua with no known heirs, died in September 2020 at age 94. His will, drafted in 2017, left the vast majority of his estimated $10 million estate – primarily farmland – to Floyd County Memorial Hospital (operating as Floyd County Medical Center) for the purpose of establishing a cancer center, so long as the hospital remained independent.

“If the Floyd County Memorial Hospital loses its independent status and becomes part of a major healthcare corporation,” the will stated, “I give ... the remainder of my property to Mayo Foundation ... to be used for Alzheimer's disease research.”

Mayo Clinic began legal action in May 2022 to claim the estate, arguing that FCMC's proposed “Stille Cancer Center” failed to meet other specifications listed in the will – particularly what it said was the requirement for onsite radiation treatment and having an oncologist “on staff.”

FCMC countered that remaining independent was the only legal contingency for receiving the gift. The hospital said it intended to meet the spirit of Stille's wishes, even if the radiation treatment element was not feasible under federal and state medical resource guidelines and economic realities.

In his ruling, Judge Stochl started off by saying “the status of the parties in the medical community or their connections to this judicial district have absolutely no bearing on the issue before the court. The court has no doubt that both parties would put the funds to good use.”

Stochl acknowledged that Stille's will also described several desired features for the cancer center, including separate areas for chemotherapy, radiation, and a family gathering space.

However, he wrote, the “highly improbable” ability of the hospital to provide radiation therapy onsite due to regulatory and financial barriers did not invalidate the gift.

“Historically, linear accelerators are not approved in a new service area if radiation therapy is available within a 50-mile radius unless the population can support it. There are four linear accelerators within a 50-mile radius of Charles City: two in Waterloo and two in Mason City,” Stochl wrote.

“Clearly, neither Herman nor (Stille's attorney Michael) Kennedy knew that requiring a cancer center in Charles City to have space for administering radiation was fruitless,” Stochl wrote.

“This court concludes that if Herman had known that FCMC could not purchase a linear accelerator, he would not have required that space to be available in the cancer center for radiation treatment,” Stochl wrote.

The court also determined that FCMC's plan to contract with outside oncologists similar to how it operates with contracted orthopedic, cardiology, ENT and other specialists who are given staff privileges, rather than employ an oncologist full time, meets the requirement to have an oncologist “on staff.”

“The court finds FCMC has taken the steps necessary to assure the court that it will have an oncologist on staff,” Stochl wrote.

Stochl also rejected Mayo's arguments that some of the estate funds might support parts of FCMC's broader $40 million expansion rather than go exclusively to a cancer clinic, including a pharmacy upgrade and shared entrance with a new clinic.

The judge ruled that those elements were part of a comprehensive, integrated plan that supports cancer care, not misuse of funds.

“A will's unambiguous language is binding,” Stochl wrote. “The Will provides that the devise to FCMC ‘is contingent on the Floyd County Memorial Hospital being maintained as an independent hospital.’ That language is unambiguous. If FCMC is not independent, Mayo gets the funds.”

“This court has concluded that FCMC is an independent hospital. Therefore, the primary contingency for FCMC receiving the bequest is met,” Stochl wrote.

“The court further finds that the will also creates a second contingency requiring FCMC to use the funds to build a cancer center and that there are enough funds to do so. The court must consider if ‘the funds available make’ building the cancer center possible. Again, the answer to that question is yes.”

Floyd County Medical Center has said it will name the new facility the “Stille Cancer Center” in honor of its benefactor, and has already begun developing architectural plans as part of overall construction at the Medical Center.

The estimated cost of the center is around $13.3 million, according to court documents. Hospital officials say they will cover the difference through other funding sources.

Plans for a potential cancer care center that are part of the court record indicate it could offer chemotherapy, immunotherapy, and other oncology services, with arrangements in place to transport patients to nearby facilities for radiation treatment.

The Medical Center's current hospital and clinic expansion project, expected to be completed next spring, includes a new pharmacy with the environmental and safety systems required to allow it to formulate and handle oncology medications.

“A cancer center here in our community will be life-changing for so many people,” said Willis. “To offer oncology services close to home is an incredible opportunity that we would not have without Mr. Stille. His generosity is truly what will build this facility, and we cannot wait to bring it to life.”

FCMC has been working with local contractors on the design for a cancer center for several years, the FCMC statement said.

“Once those plans are finalized, FCMC will share those exciting updates with the community,” it concluded.

As of Friday, Mayo had not commented on the ruling. The court ordered that Mayo pay the costs of the litigation.

James T. Vowell III, 82

James T. Vowell III, age 82 of Eldridge, passed away Thursday, June 5, 2025, at the Davenport Lutheran Home.

Per his wishes, cremation rites will be accorded and no services will be held.

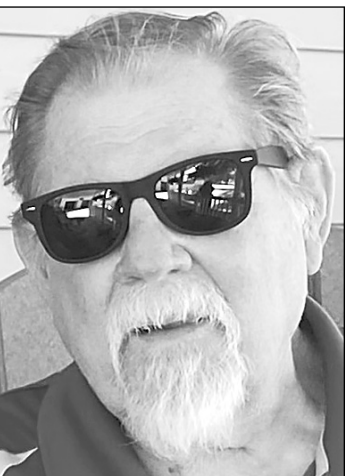

James was born on Dec. 13, 1942, in Sullivan, Indiana, the son of James and Josephine (Herzog) Vowell II.

Jim married Judy Junker on May 28, 1995.

Jim was a machinist/fabricator for Hydrotile in Nashua, and later retired from North Iowa Fab, Janesville.

He was an avid Iowa Hawkeye and Green Bay Packer fan. He and Judy enjoyed their flower gardens and would spend their day making them look pristine. They loved listening to classic country music, and they would dance the night away. His passions were fishing and spending time with family, especially his grandchildren.

James is survived by his son, James (Rose) Vowell IV, Nashua; daughter, Marian (Michael) Breiner, Visalia, California; stepchildren, Jacky Duffy, Davenport, Brad (Leanne) Junker, Eldridge, Julie (Kevin) Crockett, Iowa City, and Brent (Nichole) Junker, Blue Grass; grandchildren, James (Alyssa) Vowell V, Christopher (Kristin) Vowell, Kyle (Sierra) Vowell, Tyler

AROUND-THE-CLOCK RELIABILITY

MIDAMERICAN ENERGY COMPANY.

Thomson wants special session to override veto economy and reputation as a place where businesses can invest with confidence,” she wrote.

Reynolds said the bill would change permitting rules and inject uncertainty into critical energy projects including oil, gas and fertilizer pipelines.

Even carbon dioxide pipeline projects that rely entirely on voluntary easements would be harmed, she wrote, including a planned project by Southwest Iowa Renewable Energy that has not used eminent domain.

For those reasons, Reynolds said, she could not sign the bill.

The governor said she would enact two requirements that the bill had contained, giving an order to the Iowa Utilities Commission that all three commissioners must be present for hearings regarding proposed pipelines, utility regulations or electric transmission lines, and at least one commission must attend informational meetings that are required to be held along a project's route.

Iowa House Speaker Pat Grassley, R-New Hartford, sharply criticized the governor's veto decision and said House Republicans would begin efforts to petition for a legislative special session to override the veto.

“We will not stop fighting and stand firm on our commitment until landowners in Iowa are protected against eminent domain for private gain,” Grassley said.

Thomson said, “I am proud to join with my colleagues in the House in calling for a special session of the General Assembly to override today's veto. I am also looking forward to working with my colleagues in the General Assembly to restore Iowans' Constitutional rights, to reform Iowa's corrupt utilities regulation system, and to investigate the circumstances surrounding all aspects of Summit scandal.”

Although it is typically the governor who calls a special session of the General Assembly, as Reynolds did in 2023 regarding an abortion bill, Iowa Code allows for legislators to call a special session, but sets a high bar – two-thirds of the members in each chamber must submit a written request to their presiding officers.

That's the same super majority it would take to override the veto.

Reaction to Reynolds' decision came quickly and along predictable lines.

Summit Carbon Solutions praised the veto, saying the governor and her staff had conducted a “thoughtful and thorough review” of the legislation. The company said it remains committed to working with landowners.

Industry groups that lobbied for the veto also applauded Reynolds' action.

The American Carbon Alliance called the veto “a clear victory for Iowa's agricultural heartland, farmers, and the ethanol industry,” accusing environmental groups of trying to derail the pipeline to serve an “anti-ag, anti-ethanol and anti-energy agenda.”

The Iowa Renewable Fuels Association warned that the legislation would have “slammed the door on major new ag markets at the exact time farmers are hurting.”

Coming from the other side, the Libertarian Party of Iowa called the governor's decision “an unconscionable betrayal that will allow corporations to steal Iowa family farms through government force.”

Iowa CCI Action Board President Cherie Mortice said her organization was “extremely disappointed, but sadly not surprised, by Governor Reynolds' decision,” and that it “shows the undue influence that private interests and corporations have at our statehouse – in this case, the interests of a major political donor, Bruce Rastetter,” who is founder and executive chairman of Summit Agricultural Group.

Floyd County supervisors have long opposed the use of eminent domain for the project and are participating in a legal challenge along with eight other counties, contending that Summit should not qualify for eminent domain authority under Iowa law.

Floyd County's legal action is one of several lawsuits filed by landowners, environmental groups and state legislators led by Thomson.

Thomson and other lawmakers argue the Iowa Utilities Commission overstepped its authority when it approved Summit's request to use eminent domain, saying the project is not a true public utility but rather a private investment venture backed by federal tax credits.

In addition to concerns over property rights, Floyd County residents and officials have raised safety questions, noting the pipeline's proximity to populated areas. Critics have cited a 2020 carbon pipeline rupture in Mississippi as evidence of the potential risk.

Reynolds referred to that often-cited incident in Satartia, Mississippi, in a letter she sent to the Department of Transportation's Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration, asking about pipeline safety. A copy of PHMSA's response was included with Reynold's veto statement in a press release.

PHMSA responded that the Satartia incident – which resulted in a single hospitalization – was caused by an unusual combination of weather, environmental conditions and regulations violations that PHMSA addressed in an advisory bulletin.

“CO2 pipelines have an overall robust safety track record,” PHMSA Acting Administrator Ben Kochman wrote to Reynolds.

yet to achieve on down the road. “The girls definitely got out of their comfort zone on Saturday,” said Stastny-Hall. “They were showing their fight.” Hudson (9-3), which was ranked No. 11 in Class 2A at one point this season, had all they could handle against the Huskies.

Had it not been for senior Addie Rhoades’ two home runs – a two-run bomb in the first inning and the eventual game-winner – a solo shot that came in the third inning – it may have been a Husky win, they were that close.

N-P junior first baseman Elayna O’Neill’s first career varsity home run highlighted the fifth inning.

That round-tripper trimmed Hudson’s deficit to 4-2 and N-P scored its final run in the seventh to pull within a single digit of the Pirates.

N-P freshman hurler Callie Jensen twirled her way to six innings of work, where she allowed four earned runs, but just struck out eight and walked just two batters.

“I thought Callie pitched great all weekend,” said Stastny-Hall. “As a pitcher and a ninth-grader, she’s been around the ball fields with travel ball.”

Jensen allowed just four hits, two earned runs and struck out seven against Dunkerton (1-11).

Jensen also stole home in the Denver game – a contest N-P led by five runs at 9-4 after three complete innings. The 5-4 Cyclones stormed back with 11 runs in the last three frames before the game was called due to time constraints. N-P had scored eight runs in the bottom of the third.

“I think if we would have had another inning, we could have gone for another round because we were hitting very good off of Denver,” said Stastny-Hall.

N-P junior catcher Nevaeh Bloker stole eight bases over the weekend. She swiped five bags against the Cyclones and scored four runs. Stastny-Hall said Bloker is really coming into her own this year.

“She’s stepping up as a leader. I know she’s had issues with her arm – with her shoulder because of wrestling. The catcher should always be the heart and soul of your team in my opinion. They see everything that’s going on. They’ll call you out,” stated the N-P coach.

N-P collected 12 hits apiece versus Denver and Hudson. Against the Pirates, eighth-grader Lydia Chester and Bloker each rapped out three hits each.

Husky junior Hannah Brahn cranked two doubles versus

N-P coach says team has time to dig itself out of hole

BASEBALL: FROM 8

Not lost in the shuffle of Bronco runners that made it a carousel around the base paths, was the production at the plate by two Husky seniors – Nic Brase and Dawson Glaser.

Glaser ripped two doubles and knocked in three RBI versus the Broncos. Brase did the same along with one double smoked into the outfield.

N-P (2-6, 2-4) ended up getting caught up in a buzzsaw two nights later on Friday at Osage. The Green Devils (5-4, 3-2) capitalized on 10 more walks issued from the N-P pitching staff and proceeded to plate seven runs in the fourth inning to win this one going away, 15-1.

“It was another game where we just didn’t start out well defensively,” said Hyde. “I probably gotta do a little bit better job of getting the guys focused more and keeping them engaged – locked into every single pitch.”

Baseball fans have to remember this is the same Nashua-Plainfield team that knocked off No. 3 St. Ansgar the day before the B-K game and did so against the Saints’ ace – Jayce Schwiesow.

Granted the No. 1 hurler for the Saints no-hit N-P, but the Huskies pulled out a stunning 1-0 victory nonetheless.

To this date that is the Saints’ only loss on the season as they’re 11-1 overall and 6-1 in the TIC East.

Hyde wanted to emphasize that despite the setbacks in the first three weeks of the season, there’s still time to turn it around.

“That’s what I’m trying to explain to the kids is, the season’s not over – whether we’re 2-6 or 2-7, whatever we are,” said Hyde. “What we have to remember is we beat one of the best teams in the state that returned seven or eight of their starters from the previous year. It doesn’t matter who is on the mound for us or not, we just gotta go and compete.”

N-P did just that on Monday against another TIC East ace in North Butler Bearcat senior Brody Wangsness. The Bearcat flamethrower shutout N-P by a score of 3-0 in what was a duel between two of the better arms in the league as Glaser took to the hill as well that night.

N-P did manage three hits against Wangsness – two doubles by the Kalainoff brothers, Eli and Zeke – but could not push a run across the board.

Glaser had one bad inning – the fifth – and allowed three earned runs and four hits. Glaser sent down 13 Bearcat batters via strikeout.

Wangsness struck out 16 Husky batters.

“Dawson pitched well. We had one inning get away from us,” said Hyde. “Sometimes you gotta tip your cap to the other pitcher. Brody was really, really good that night. When he’s on, he’s really good.”

North Butler (3-7) is tied for last place in the league with Northwood Kensett (3-7). Both squads sport 1-6 league marks.

As far as how the Belmond-Klemme game went down, the Broncos plated four runs in the top of the seventh to take an 11-9 lead. N-P responded in the bottom half of the frame by tying the game at 11-11 with two more runs. A couple more runs played by B-K in the eight proved to be the difference.

“I just tell our kids, expect it to be tough, but you have to accept that challenge,” said Hyde. “You have to want it.”

Kelly Terpstra/Reporter

Nashua-Plainfield’s Matthew Malven gets ready to make contact with the baseball during Wednesday night’s abbreviated game against New Hampton.

Stats tell a story and it doesn’t paint a pretty picture for N-P in terms of walks issued by the Husky pitching staff.

N-P is 111th out of 121 teams in Class 1A in walks allowed with 55 in just eight games. N-P pitchers have made 16 appearances in just over 52 innings pitched. That averages out to over a walk an inning.

New Hampton (13-3) took on N-P on Wednesday in Plainfield and led 3-0 in the top of the third inning before the game was suspended due to lightning.

The game was eventually postponed and moved to Thursday in New Hampton where the non-conference tilt resumed in the bottom of the second inning.

It’s still early in the season for the Huskies, but summer flies by in the blink of an eye. That’s why it’s important to fix mistakes as soon as one can before the damage done becomes irreparable.

“You’ve got a month in a half and that’s your time to prove it,” said Hyde. “We’ve dug ourselves into a hole, but there is still time to get out of that hole. Obviously, we’re not going to be a one or two seed, more than likely now because of the hole we’ve dug ourselves into. There’s time to win some ball games and get back into the season.”

For some of Hyde’s players – notably his two senior starters in Glaser and Brase – this will be the last season they play prep baseball and he wants to help them finish a career strong, which will hopefully lead to more victories for the Huskies.

“You only get so much time. Some of these seniors, they’ve got 10, 15 games left of their careers and then it’s over with,” said Hyde.

year and plans on attending Hawkeye Community College, where he'll also suit up for the Redtail sports shooting team.

“He’s been a solid shooter. I hate to see him go,” said Oleson.

Freshmen compete on the junior varsity level and that best overall score for N-P was a 905, good for 18th place. Barlow (189), Hunter Brase (185), Kinley Roths (179), Sinnwell (179) and Abby Groesbeck (173) comprised that aggregate total.

The Huskies aren’t quite done yet as Barlow, Sinnwell, Hunter Brase and Demro will each compete at the skeet state meet in Cedar Falls on Friday, June 20. That will be the first time a shooter from CC/N-P/RRMR will have taken part in the state meet that features the discipline of skeet.

N-P golfer earns IGA scholarship

Nashua-Plainfield Paige Franzen was one of several prep golfers to receive the Iowa Golf Association (IGA)’s Ann Griffel Scholarship Award.

Franzen, who finished fourth at the Class 1A state tournament, is set to attend Coe College and also plans to golf while pursuing a nursing degree.

“To me, receiving this scholarship means that I am one step closer to achieving my dreams of becoming a nurse. Additionally, I will be continuing my golf career at Coe College and will continue to grow the game for those around me. I am truly honored to be a recipient of the Ann Griffel Scholarship.”

Paige is the daughter of Philip and Jamee Franzen.

N-P shooters have solid showing at state

Coach says Huskies' lone senior has been a 'solid shooter'

By Kelly Terpstra

For five Husky freshmen and a Nashua-Plainfield senior – it was a final chapter put in the books for Mike Oleson's split squad of Charles City, Nashua-Plainfield and RRM R last weekend.

Six N-P trapshooters competed in the final meet of the season as a collective group in state singles competition on Sunday in Cedar Falls.

"I think we shot well, not quite good enough. The kids had a good season," said Oleson. "I'm very proud of the kids."

N-P freshman Lane Barlow led the way for the Huskies as he fired a 189 out of 200. Competitors in singles competition fire off 100 rounds in the morning and then another 100 in the afternoon.

Husky brothers Nic Brase (senior) and Hunter Brase (freshman) each racked up scores of 185. Maverick Sinnwell (179), Tate Demro (171) and Corbin Johnson (169) finished off the scoring for the N-P squad members.

The highest senior varsity top squad finish – which tabulates CC/N-P/RRMR's top five individual shooters – came from the shotguns of Cole Jones (188), Hunter Boehmer (187), Kyler Eskildsen (186), Nic Brase (185) and Ty Hejna (179). Those rounds equaled a 66th overall placing with a 925.

Nashua-Plainfield senior Nic Brase waits for the throw at second base during Wednesday night's game against New Hampton that was suspended with two outs in the bottom of the second because of inclement weather.

Free passes are killing Nashua-Plainfield. Baseball can be a long, hot summer if your hurlers on the mound can't find the strike zone.

That's what Mason Hyde's Huskies have been dealing with recently as walks have inevitably led to losses.

"Bottom line is we have to throw more strikes," said Hyde, in his first year as N-P head baseball coach. "We had 19 walks in that game and that's just never gonna cut it no matter who you play."

Those 19 walks Hyde is referring to came against one-win Belmond-Klemme (1-9) last week Wednesday, a game Nashua-Plainfield led 9-7 headed into the final inning only to see B-K end up winning a wild 13-11 game that also saw the Huskies commit four errors.

"When it gets to that point, we just gotta learn how to pitch to contact and let our defense make more plays," said Hyde.

The walks can also lead to long innings where it's a lot harder mentally to focus on fielding the ball. Standing around in the field for long periods of time can also zap a team's energy.

"If you're not throwing strikes, it almost hurls your own teammates on the defensive side asleep because you're just not expecting the ball to be hit to you," said Hyde. "It's something we just can't have."

Huskies get first softball win, play well at Hudson tourney

Of the Reporter

It's a simple statement with an obvious explanation.

"They all see it," said Nashua-Plainfield softball head coach Jessica Stastny-Hall.

What that declarative revelation means to Stastny-Hall's Huskies is they realize the progress they're making could well lead to numerous wins down the stretch as the summer sports season heats up in June.

And oh boy is it getting hot as July could be even warmer and the parallel is there as the Husky bats have generated some smoke out on the diamond as well.

The climb back up to get in the win column started on Saturday in Hudson.

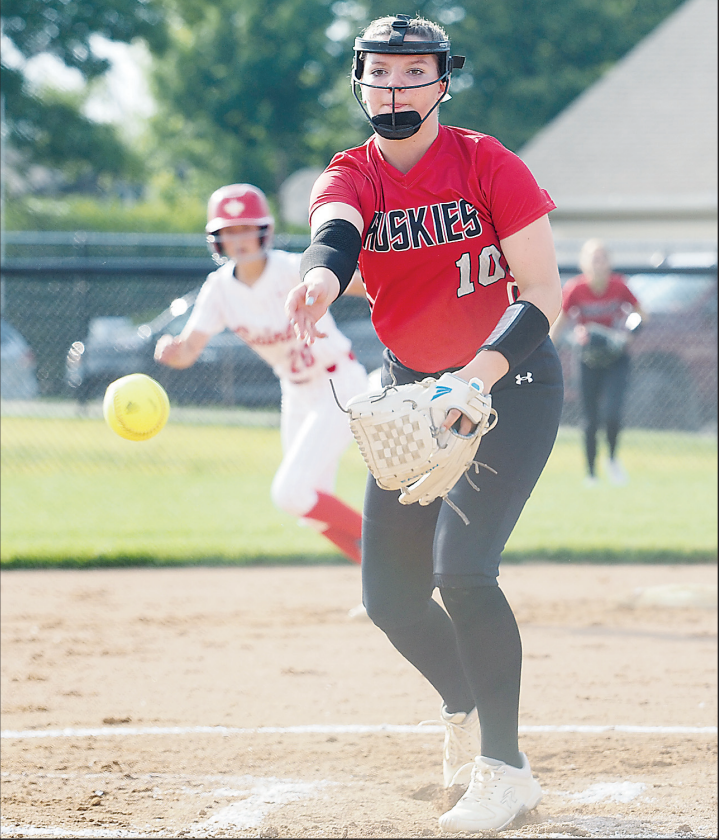

"I thought the Hudson Tournament was the best I had seen the girls play for a long time," said Stastny-Hall.

Yes, indeed as N-P (1-9, 0-6) won its first game of the season in a 5-2 win over Dunkerton and the Huskies have definitely caught fire as they almost knocked off the previously ranked host school as Hudson held off the Huskies for a 4-3 triumph. Denver was another near miss at last Saturday's weekend invite as N-P couldn't hold on to a 9-4 lead and lost 15-11 to the Cyclones.

"We battled back," said Stastny-Hall. "We had a lot of good hits on Saturday. We got very aggressive."

Sure, there were some slip-ups as No. 9 Osage (12-0, 5-0) took it to the Huskies last Thursday by a score of 11-0 and North Butler (7-6, 3-5) also blanked N-P, 10-0, this past Monday – but it appears the Huskies are turning the corner with many more bright spots
