It wouldn't be a Chickasaw County 4-H and FFA Achievement Show without Mother Nature rearing her head.

And 2025 was certainly no exception. Then again, the heat, for the most part stayed away. The rain, however, didn't.

"We definitely had to battle that rain, especially [Thursday and Friday]," Chickasaw County ISU Extension Youth Coordinator Makaela Kime said Saturday. "We did lose power for about five minutes yesterday, and that was interesting during our bucket bottle show but overall, everyone just kind of went with the flow and we survived."

And maybe even thrived as the annual show wrapped up its six-day run with the annual pancake breakfast put on by Homeland Energy Solutions that preceded the livestock auction Monday morning.

Hennessy, who works part-time for New Hampton Community Schools as the district's webmaster and community relations representative, made his comments early during Monday's meeting, and board members spent considerable time later in the day discussing a possible 2025-26 budget amendment to replace the air-conditioning unit at the courthouse.

During its July 7 meeting, supervisors learned that the county's ending fund balance at the end of the 2024-25 fiscal year was almost $2.94 million, up more than $1.3 million what they projected when they were putting together the budget for the fiscal year that started on July 1.

Board members had requested that department heads let them know if they had requests that they would like to see included in a budget amendment.

And several department heads did just that — ranging from Sheriff Ryan Shawver asking the county to include $80,000 to purchase and outfit a new vehicle to Treasurer Matt Ysbrand requesting additional funds to pay for overtime caused by the elimination of a position in his department and Conservation Board Director Chad Humpal asking that money be considered

Plainfield Days has plenty to celebrate

Small town honors its 'Citizen of the Year,' crowns new queen during annual festival

By KELLY TERPSTRA Of the Reporter

There's a lot more to Kathy Remley than just her famous potato salad and top-notch gardening skills.

It's one of the reasons the longtime resident of Plainfield was named "Citizen of the Year" at the small town's local festival last week.

Remley obviously loves the town she's called home for the past two decades.

She's not alone.

The Bremer County town of just under 400 people might be small as far as population is concerned, but they sure do throw one heck of a big party.

Plainfield Days kicked off with a resounding start last week Thursday and by all accounts it was a good time had by all.

Remley was honored with that prestigious award by Mayor Tom Geise during ceremonies on Thursday that also crowned royalty.

"She's been a shining example of what it means to be a good neighbor and a dedicated citizen. Her kindness, hard work and selfless dedication to making our town better for all of us truly embodies the spirit of Plainfield," said Geise.

A taken aback Remley, who

The show included a dozen celebrities, four of whom were selected as finalists. They included Reinke Goddard/ Bearman Farms' Mat Goddard, Kukrul, New Hampton Elementary School teacher Erica Koster and Sumner-Fredericksburg High School math teacher Wanda Reinke.

The finalists showed a meat goat before four pails in the show ring. The audience had five minutes to put money in the pails to pick their favorite celebrity - with Reinke taking the top prize and Koster earning reserve champion honors.

The Celebrity Show brought in $1374.74 and this money will help the Chickasaw County 4-H to help supplement livestock equipment and 4-H programming.

Monday's auction, the Big 4 Fairgrounds were a proverbial beehive of activity and not just because the 4-Hers and FFA members were dodging raindrops, either.

"Everyone adapted really well," Kime said, "and the kids did great. I'm just so proud of them and the work they put into their projects and animals. It's amazing to see how they have grown in a year.

"It's been a great fair week, and it's not just the kids, it's the superintendents, the parents, the people who come out and support. It makes you feel so good to see how supported our kids are.'

The Achievement Show also got a large turnout for its annual BBQ Saturday, when the Chickasaw County Pork Producers served up a great meal before awards were handed out and the fair royalty was crowned on a perfect summer evening.

Recent New Hampton High School graduate Carrie Schwickerath was named fair queen, soon-to-be Nashua-

Hennings was named fair queen runner-up, Marjorie Holthaus was crowned Little Miss Chickasaw County Fair while Evelyn Hanson was the Little Miss runner-up and Cullen Mueterthies was crowned as the Little Mister.

What made Saturday nice was the fact that there was barely a cloud in the sky. The same could not be said for the previous two days. On Thursday, the Horse Show had to be moved indoors because of rain and then Friday was, well, a mess.

"It really came down, I mean buckets," Kime said, "but again, the kids handled it so well."

Kime said that while horse numbers were down, the beef show entries remained about the same and the number of pigs at the fair was up. She also took heart in the fact that 65 Clover Kids took part in the Static Show that kicked things off.

"We had to actually pull in some extra judges," she said. "Some of it was that our Clover Kid numbers are up of their lives.

Plainfield High School senior Madelyn tremendously. Because that bodes well for the future."

For Kime, the second Achievement Show go-around had her excited for 2026.

A year ago, she accepted the youth coordinator position just weeks before the Achievement Show was held.

"I've been able to get to know the kids. I see them out and about, and now, it's the little things - like I can put names to faces and that's really cool to see the difference in them from last year to this year," she said. "The same goes for our club leaders, our volunteers, the Big 4 Fair Board because all of them are important to making this a success."

And the youth coordinator has big goals for 2026.

'We want to make sure that we keep them engaged," she said. "Our clubs have grown, not as well as we'd like, but they're definitely getting there. We want to keep those numbers growing because 4-H is such a worthwhile just to kind of help with congestion organization that teaches its members in the building, but it's great to see things they're going to use for the rest

Public Health administrator makes pitch for restored funding for a new storage shed.

Public Health Administrator Lisa Welter asked county leaders for two things to restore funding for Environmental Health so the director's position would return to working 35 hours a week and $100,000 for Public Health so that it could give its employees 3 percent raises, hire a full-time aide and hire a part-time nurse.

Welter, along with Board of Health members Jeremy McGrath and Joan Knoll, told supervisors that moving the Environmental Health director from 30 to 35 hours a week would essentially be a "wash" because the county would receive more money from a state grant program to cover those costs.

The Public Health requests would recoup less than a third of the $353,000 the department was cut during the crafting of the 2025-26 budget this past spring.

"People are struggling to do daily tasks that you guys take for granted, and they're being neglected," Welter said. "We all would do what we can do in our power to keep our grandparents, parents and our children safe. How would you feel if a family member was being neglected and with that?"

She pointed out that in June - the first month in which three Public Health positions were eliminated - her department did 36 less aide visits and 135 less homemaker visits. Welter also went to bat for her employees, saying that almost all other county employees received 3 percent raises on July 1.

McGrath said that he hoped supervisors took Hennessy's comments to heart.

'We're still going to have to prioritize homecare," he said, "but at least if we can help someone like Kyle, we can at least do that.'

Hennessy's mother, Kim, said that when her son lost the services from Public Health, it reached out to another firm that offered services and has been sorely disappointed in that company's services.

"Sometimes, they haven't even shown up," she said, "and when they do, a lot of times they're late. ... It's heartbreaking to me that we're going through this."

On Tuesday morning, she said in a phone interview that the company voiced an opinion on the Public Health was supposed to have someone at the Hennessy home that morning, "but they called and said they couldn't make it. Not balance that we can do this."

being treated like this? Would you be OK once did we ever have to deal with that with Public Health and now, it happens all the time."

Knoll pointed out that during the budget discussions, Supervisor Travis Suckow said there were at least five firms that would provide services to county residents, "and we only got one that came into the county? ... And you heard the story, is that what we really want for our residents?"

Board Chairman Jake Hackman said that a budget amendment would be considered after the county received bids for the new air-conditioning unit that would replace the failing unit the courthouse currently has. During Monday's meeting, supervisors agreed to take bids for the unit through Aug. 8 and open them on Aug. 11.

All you can do is give numbers to Sheila and see what it all equals," Hackman said to Welter. He added that Shekleton could "compile all the requests that have come in so far and bring it back in the next couple of weeks.'

Only one supervisor, Issac Carter, request Monday when he said that "I think we're healthy enough with our fund

Project AWARE hits milestone 'trash mark' on Cedar River

By Bob Steenson

bsteenson@charlescitypress.com

Paddling canoes laden with garbage, volunteers with Iowa Project AWARE glided off the Cedar River at the landing just above the dam in Charles City on Tuesday afternoon, celebrating a milestone that had been planned to occur elsewhere.

Somewhere among the items the volunteers collected that day was the one-millionth pound of garbage that Project AWARE has pulled from Iowa rivers since it began 22 years ago.

About 190 volunteers were on the river Tuesday, part of an estimated 250 taking part throughout the week, event officials said.

This year's annual river cleanup had been planned to start on the Winnebago River for the first couple of days this week, then shift to the Shell Rock River.

Although the Tosanak Recreation Area near Marble Rock was still the overnight camping location on Wednesday and Thursday evening, the group hadn't intended to venture onto the Cedar River or make Seth Zimmermann of Morse, Iowa, a Project AWARE board member and 19-year project veteran, said the Winnebago River was too high and the Iowa Department of Natural Resources determined it would be unsafe to have 200 people in canoes - some of them inexperienced – out on that water.

"It was strictly a safety decision. We talked to the DNR. The Cedar was super stable. It looked safe to put 200 people on, and so we pivoted... This is Plan B," Zimmermann said.

"We're happy to be on the Cedar. It's been beautiful. The weather's been perfect. The water levels are great and they're finding lots of garbage," he said. The change to the Cedar River and the landing at Charles City brought with it a serendipitous connection to the community's river history.

The project has charted how much garbage it collects each day of the project each year, and had calculated that Tuesday would be day they would hit the 1 million pound milestone.

David Williamson, a Boone-area sculptor who has been involved with Project AWARE since its early years, has been working with the group this year to make a commemorative sculpture marking the one-millionth pound of trash, using materials collected from the river including a piece selected from the items pulled out Tuesday.

Williamson is also the artist who worked with kids and adult focus groups in the Charles City community to design and create the Revival sculpture that is installed at Victory Park, commemorating the flood of 2008 that washed out the historic pedestrian swinging bridge over the Cedar River.

Williamson, who built Revival from salvaged pieces of the bridge, said he's looking for the same kind of community connection in the new piece marking Project AWARE's trash milestone.

When he learned that the event would occur on the Cedar River in Charles City instead of on the Winnebago at the Floyd County Fossil and Prairie Park Preserve, "I thought it'd be fun to kind of at least let locals know that I was in town, not for another 'Revival,' but for Project AWARE."

was surprised, but also thrilled about receiving the award, had this to say after speaking to the audience in attendance.

"I love this community. It's like family," said Remley.

It was definitely an emotional moment for Remley, 78, who worked for the Iowa Department of Transportation (IDOT) for 20-plus years to help make roads safe in and around Plainfield. She was also on the town's City Council and helps maintain the Plainfield city sign that sits right on Main St. down from the First Baptist Church.

Geise is also Remley's neighbor, so he knows first hand the impact she's had on his community.

"She's a quiet contributor and constantly contributing to the city of Plainfield," said Geise. "We're very lucky to have her in our community. I'm blessed to have her as a neighbor.'

Plainfield might not be as bustling as it once was back in the day, but it's still thriving according to Remley.

"I just like the smallness. It used to be we had the highway go through here to Nashua-Plainfield junior Nevaeh and I'd come home from work and it would take me 10 minutes to get across the street to go to the post office," said Remley. "We do good as a small town. We do. And now with the baseball/softball complex – we're so proud of that. Anytime somebody comes to town that is not from Plainfield, I say you gotta see what we have."

Remley's memorable moment that helped get the ball rolling during a night that saw over 500 people take part in the free-will offering meal that was sponsored by Chandler's Locker being crowned queen.

his butt off. It's kids like him that we need for the future.'

Glaser pitched six innings in the South Winn game, gave up nine hits and four earned runs. He struck out seven and walked just two batters. His relief appearance against Riceville saw him get the save in one-and-a-third innings, which included two batters struck out. That may not seem like gaudy numbers, but the sheer fact that he was pitching at all after dealing with a sore AC joint in his shoulder was remarkable.

It was Glaser's mindset, along with the rest of his teammates, that helped turn a season around and finish it the right way by playing competitive baseball against some of the better teams in the area

"For future's sake, no matter what happens the night prior, you gotta go into every game thinking you're 0-0. Once we got that mindset come postseason, I don't think we really backed down from anybody. Not that we backed down from teams throughout the year, but it just had a different feeling, slash energy come postseason,' said Hvde.

Glaser possessed one of the better arms in the league over his tenure with N-P. He struck out 58 batters – tied for fourth best in the conference – via 46 innings pitched. He was 2-4 with a 2.28 ERA

Glaser also could swing the lumber as evident by his team-leading .327 batting average. He collected 16 hits and knocked in nine runs.

N-P junior first baseman Eli Kalainoff is now a

He was a first teamer as a freshman in 2023 and has now been picked for the second team for two vears in a row.

"He's an all-around athlete that you just love to have on your side," said Hyde.

Like Glaser, Kalainoff rebounded with a solid showing down the stretch.

Kalainoff ripped two homers over the fence and batted .246 on the year to go along with a team-leading 12 runs scored.

"He ended up with not the start that he probably wanted and throughout the middle of the year. Towards the end there you could tell he kind of settled in and obviously came up with some huge hits for us," said Hyde. "That's something you can lean on going into next year, remembering everything is possible."

It seems like sophomore pitcher/third baseman Kolbie Vance is just starting to tap into his talent out on the diamond. Vance was a microcosm of his team as he - like Glaser and Kalainoff - stepped up big time when the pressure in the postseason was at its most intense.

"Kolbie had one heckuva game on the mound in our first round district game versus Riceville," said Hyde. "From the first time that I put him in this year, it didn't go so great. The last time we put him in he pitched dang near a complete game last game of the year," said Hyde.

Vance pitched into the sixth inning to earn the win over Riceville. He struck out eight and allowed just four hits.

He was 1-3 with a 7.74 ERA during the regular season. He fanned 25 batters in right at 19 innings toiled on the hill. Vance became more comfortable at the plate as the season progressed and Hyde said he could see the maturation in one of his key players take shape as his confidence grew with each success he encountered. He batted .243 with a team-leading 17 hits in his leadoff spot.

"Kolbie had some very tough luck at the plate this year. I think he ended up striking out seven times on the whole year," said Hyde. "He just hit a lot of baseballs right at people. It's tough.'

N-P went 5-16 overall and 3-11 in the league, good for seventh place. The Huskies graduated Glaser, senior second baseman Nic Brase and reserve Blake Wahl.

"We bring back a bunch of experience. Obviously, we lose two pieces that were a big part of our team, but experience helps a lot. You still gotta put the work in over the offseason. That's what I kind of preached to 'em after that If Jensen can increase those offensive numbers next year at the plate, watch N-P's win total increase as well.

"It will be very interesting to see how her bat goes the next three years that she plays high school ball. I think it's just going to get better and better over the years – the same with her pitching," said Stastny-Hall.

It's inside the circle where there may be just as much promise, if not more, to Jensen's game.

Jensen lowered her ERA from a year ago (9.74) to 5.44. She collected 108 K's her freshman season and 84 strikeouts her eighth-grade year. That means she's eight shy of 200 for her career with 192.

"She's still a freshman. I think eventually she'll find her voice. Callie definitely got out of her comfort zone," said Stastny-Hall. "In time she's going to get faster and stronger in all areas of softball. It's just the little things that we gotta work on."

Elayna O'Neill, a junior, was another valuable weapon for the Huskies in 2025. She was named to the honorable-mention team. Stastny-Hall said Jensen's She led the team with 10 RBI changeup also improved, which and played third, first and even caught some games behind the

"For the future, I would see her staying at first base. We did try her at third," said Stastnylooking for Jensen to become Hall. "She also can catch. She more of a vocal leader as she has played every position I've asked her to play except for pitcher.

O'Neill was a member of Jeff the diamond next year as she'll Trost's state title runner-up girls golf team in Class 1A. It took a little bit of an adjustment for one of Stastny-Hall's best utility players to get caught up to speed during that transition from spring to summer sports, but when she did it was all-conference worthy production.

"She is very steady," said Stastny-Hall. "It took her a while to come back, because she's a golfer. I'll be the first to admit, she likes to golf swing. That's what she struggled with at the very beginning."

O'Neill sported a .406 OBP and it was her bat that heated and slugged .475 – tops on the team.

N-P played to just a 4-21 record overall and went 0-14 in the TIC East, but the Huskies clubbed her first career home lost all five of its one-run games

N-P's conference was one of the better ones in the state as four teams at the top of the standings were ranked for a large portion of the year.

Osage (28-2, 13-1) won the league and reached the 2A regional finals. The Green Devils fell just short of a state berth, losing to East Marshall 3-2 in their last game of the summer.

Mason City Newman (24-5, 12-2) beat Ankeny Christian, 2-0, to advance to the state tourney in Fort Dodge. The Knights are seeded seventh in Class 1A.

West Fork (22-6, 11-3) beat Central Springs (15-15, 8-6) with a run in the bottom of the eighth inning in those two squad's regional final to win 3-2 over the Panthers and will also be playing at state in Fort Dodge.

Stastny-Hall has high hopes next summer for a squad that played considerably better than their record would indicate in 2025.

"As long as my seniors come out next year we should be a very solid team," said Stastny-Hall. "It's going to be very interesting to see how we do next vear.

We can stop HIV, Iowa: by staying up-to-date on recommended screenings!

Health screenings help identify illnesses before you have symptoms. The CDC recommends:

- All people ages 13-64 should be screened for HIV at least once in their lifetime.
 - Pregnant women should be screened for HIV during each pregnancy.

Talk to your healthcare provider about getting screened! Unsure if you've had a screening? Ask them to check your records.

The 'Ionia Ball' tradition continues this summer

It's become a rite of summer in the small town of Ionia as kids from the communities of Ionia, Nashua, New Hampton and Charles City gather once a week for an evening of ball at the small town's ballpark, and 2025 certainly hasn't been an exception as ballplayers — some of whom might be future Huskies, Chickasaws and Comets — take the field to hone their skills, play with old friends, meet new ones and have fun.

The ballplayers are coached by Chad and Heather Hackman, who are assisted by helpers Caleb Sinnwell and Hayden and Addie Hackman.

The coaches would like to thank all the parents that have helped this summer, as well as the city of Ionia for the use of the field, supplies and awards.

Thanks for a great summer, Huskies!

Jensen, O'Neill named to all-league teams

By Kelly Terpstra Of the Reporter

Callie Jensen took her game to another level this past summer for Jessica Stastny-Hall's Nashua-Plainfield Husky softball squad.

Jensen, just a freshman, is now a two-time all-conference pick for the Top of Iowa's East division after she was selected as a member of the second team all-league squad recently.

Jensen led the Huskies in batting average (.422), hits (27) and on-base-percentage (.424). She also racked up a slugging percentage of .469. That's a marked improvement from her .188 batting average at the plate a year ago as an eighth-grader, when she was named to the honorable-mention all-conference squad. While Jensen only walked just once in 64 at-bats, she struck out just four times.

That means she puts the bat

"She was always a player that you could count on getting on base or putting the ball in play to sacrifice herself to score a run," said Stastny-Hall. "She's definitely worked on her hitting in the offseason.

Look for Jensen's power numbers to increase as well in 2026. She roped three doubles all-conference selections in the TIC East. The Husky hurler was a second-team pick as a freshman.

Glaser caps standout prep career on first team; Kalainoff and Vance also honored by league coaches

BY KELLY TERPSTRA

Of the Reporter

No one knew what to expect when it came to the extent of Dawson Glaser's shoulder injury that was sustained with four games left in the regular season.

The same could be said for his Nashua-Plainfield Huskies, who had won just three games up until that point in a 2025 campaign that hadn't gone as planned.

The injury to N-P's ace only muddled that uncertainty.

But what a finish it was for Mason Hyde's Huskies as his Top of Iowa East squad came within an eyelash of playing for a district title earlier this month.

That's just one of the reasons that Hyde, who just wrapped up his first year as N-P head coach, is so excited for next summer.

"I feel like just as a team we didn't play up to our standards of what we were expecting throughout the whole year," said Hyde. "With the way the season ended, it's something you can really carry into next year even though we were only a five-win team.³

N-P was awarded for that prowess out on the baseball diamond with three all-league

3-1 district win over Riceville. He also started the next game in the postseason semifinal matchup with South Winneshiek. Glaser's grittiest and potent fastball over six innings of work gave his team a shot in a wild 8-7 loss that saw the Huskies put the favored Warriors on the ropes, but could not connect on a knockout punch to advance to the district championship.

"As everything played out we pretty much said that we weren't going to rule anything out until it's completely over with. He just kept getting better and just kept getting better," said Hyde about Glaser's injury. We finally got to that decision where he thought he was good to go and he pitched well. What hurt us in that last game was we had some errors early in the picks in the TIC East, which game. Looking at it now, with were voted on recently by the us scoring those runs in the Glaser, who wrapped up his prep baseball career as a fourtime all-league standout, was selected for the first team squad for the third consecutive year.

"If I could have him for another four years, I would love to," smiled Hyde. "He's a kid that showed up every day with a bunch of energy. He has such a big passion for baseball, which is a huge part of it as well."

seventh, maybe that does help us there. But that's just how baseball works out, though.'

Glaser pitched one of the better games of his career during the regular season in a 1-0 victory over a then-ranked No. 2 St. Ansgar squad. Glaser tossed a two-hit shutout in that key victory over St. Ansgar. The Saints will play in the Class 1A state tournament next week at Merchants Park in Carroll.

"He's obviously a very talented kid," said Hyde. "He worked SEE BASEBALL, 5
